During Raid On 'Amen' Picnic

AGENTS TELL OF SEIZING HIGH TEST 'BREW'

'Bartenders' Insist They Were Invited Guests, Say Beer Tasted Like 'Near'

Three men arrested when prohibition agents late yesterday raided the Amen Corner picnic at McKees Rocks, attended by a host of high office-holders and politicians, were held for court, charged with sale and possession of high test beer, by a United States commissioner today.

Two of the defendants, Henry Dippel and Fred Drum, drayman, testified, were serving beer at an improvised bar when they were detailed by Deputy Prohibition Administrator Harold D. Wilson to invaded the place. The third, Samuel Price, they testified, was selling tickets at $2.50 each at the entrance to the grounds.

EACH GIVES BAIL

Each was released in $1,000 bail pending Federal Court trial. Dippel and Drum denied they were connected with the picnic, saying they were present as invited guests.

Fred M. Hohmann, agent, who preferred the charges, testified he had been assigned to the picnic by Administrator Wilson to investigate reports that high test beer was being sold. Hohmann testified:

BY ARROW

"I went to Indian Mound by following direction arrows from McKees Rocks. When I reached the top of the hill, I met Price, who asked me, 'Have you got a ticket?' He told me the price was $2.50 for eats and drink, and I bought one.

"I saw about 50 men crowded around two bars in a one-story frame shack. I shoved through and got a couple of drinks and ate a sandwich. I saw Dipple placing drinks on the bar."

Hohmann said he telephoned his headquarters and a raiding squad was sent to the scene.

Under cross-examination Hohmann testified he had seen no

Today

Plenty of Bad News.
The Good Unnoticed.
We Go Back to the Sea.
Racketeer Thoroughness.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

MOST OF THE NEWS seems to be bad news every day because disagreeable things interest the public. Such is human nature. There are a hundred million industrious, well behaved, honest people in the United States. And you hear nothing about them. Nobody mentions the good wives and loyal husbands. But, if a lady throws the cat at her husband, and goes to court, she appears on the front page.

THEREFORE, reading your newspapers, you nearly always say to yourself:

"What a world this is!"

IN EGYPT, Egyptians are fighting, killing and wounding each other. Great Britain sends two battleships and reminds the opposing factions that they are responsible "for the lives and property of foreigners."

THE EGYPTIANS said:

"If we can only get rid of tyrannical Great Britain, how happy we shall be!"

Now they're killing each other.

IN INDIA, Mohammedans kill Hindus, and Hindus kill Mohammedans, the Mohammedans, being born fighters, doing most of the killing.

India said:

"If we could only get rid of Great Britain, how happy we should be."

But meanwhile they are busy killing each other. Sixty million Mohammedans, two hundred fifty million Hindus, will not live at peace while there is a Mohammedan left.

ASIA'S population that think they want only peace and the right to govern themselves find, when the time comes, that they want other things, including a good deal of civil war.

SENATOR M'KELLAR, of Tennessee, attacking the secret negotiations of the naval treaty in London, declares that they have brought France and Italy "to the verge of war."

What worries France is not Mussolini alone, but the possibility of a combination between Germany and Italy, Italy to have Germany's support in case of trouble, and Germany, if trouble comes, to get back what France recently took from her.

We are well out of all that.

ACCORDING to science, we all came from the water. The little germ of earth life first started safe in the salt sea. It developed. Some enterprising sea-dweller crawled, or was washed ashore. Then earth life began, and that developed through evolution. Some ran, some hopped, some climbed. Some burrowed in the ground. Some flew and became birds. They stopped thinking then because flying made them safe, and thinking became unnecessary.

The weakest of them, with small teeth, useless nails, not much strength and little speed, HAD TO USE THEIR BRAINS. That's how we arrived. Scientists tell you that.

AND TO THIS DAY, human beings, and many other animals, tend to go back to the sea at intervals. The ocean attracts them. Some want to be buried in it, many are unhappy unless they are afloat on it. Others want their bodies burned and ashes scattered on the salt waters.

A GERMAN scientist finds that, regardless of all that, we should go to the seashore occasionally. Milk and eggs and the meat of animals along the seacoast are found to be rich in iodine.

On the North Sea coast, milk of cows contains 240 "gammas" of iodine per quart, as against 20 "gammas" in the Swiss mountains. Two hundred and forty "gammas" really amount to only one-millionth of a gram of iodine per quart. But that's enough to keep you free from goiter.

Shore eggs have iodine also. Cows and hens eat seaweed.

So take your children to the seaside.

WHEN YOU contemplate the work of modern gangs, you find that you are dealing with efficiency and thoroughness.

Twenty firms in New York's dress industry tell the police that they have paid at the rate of two million dollars a year to racketeer-gangsters. It is no exaggeration to say that the gangsters, racketeers and bootleggers in this country collect an annual revenue greater than that of the national government, which, as you know, collects many billions. That may have something to do with "hard times." Too many kinds of taxation—national, state, municipal and racketeer.

IN THE WAY of airplanes, "no news" is bad news.

Until late yesterday nothing had been heard of the cabin monoplane K of New Haven, which on Tuesday, leaving Long Island headed for Buenos Aires, began the longest non-stop flight ever attempted.

The bad news came that the plane had crashed—and next

4 TRAPPED BY FLAMES RESCUED

Crowds See Girl Carried From Downtown Studio; Woman, 2 Children Saved

A fainting girl was rescued from flames at 626 Smithfield street today while a crowd of curious thousands gathered in the street to watch firemen fight the blaze.

A few hours earlier a woman and two children were carried to safety as flames broke out in a shed in the rear of 1324 Fifth avenue and spread to the three-story building.

Hearing the screams of a girl trapped by smoke on the third floor of the building at 626 Smithfield street, Joe Penwal, of 2627 Mission street, South Side, dashed up the stairs to her rescue.

TRAPPED IN STUDIO

The girl, Miss Olympia Ponzi, 17, of 8419 Frankstown avenue, had been unable to escape when flames broke out in the Frank Chircosta photographic studio, where she was employed.

Penwal rushed into the studio,

'GAG' THREAT ON TREATY DEFIED

Hoover Forces Hold Cloture Ready to Shut Off Debate As Johnson Blocks Vote

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON.
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, July 17.—In the face of an administration threat to impose gag rule, Senator Johnson (Rep.), of California, leader of the opposition to the London naval treaty, today blocked an agreement for a vote on the pact next week.

Johnson dramatically announced he would ask no quarter from the treaty's friends, and declared he would continue fighting the pact indefinitely. The Californian challeneged the administration to impose cloture, which would gage the Senate by limiting each senator to single hour's debate.

Senator aWtson (Rep.), of Indiana, the administration floor leader, immediately began circulating a petition asking cloture. Under the rules, the petition will force a vote on adoption of cloture with 48 hours after its pres-

BAN TAXI RAIDS ON BUS TRADE

The Public Service Commission today handed out bad news for the bus riders who have been enjoying cut rates in taxicabs.

The commission announced at Harrisburg that it had enjoined the Yellow and Green drivers from moving along the routes of the Pittsburgh Motor Coach Company and picking up prospective coach riders. Furthermore, the commission forbids the drivers offering, anywhere, cut rates on their regular charge.

The coach company, subsidiary of the Pittsburgh Railways, had complained that the drivers were hurting the bus business by picking up loads of four and five passengers and hauling them downtown for 25 cents, which is just what the buses charge.

The drivers have been indulging this practice for more than a year. Walter Laird vice president of the Parmalee Company, which controls both taxi companies, refused to order the drivers to stop.

Along Baum boulevard the practice flourished. Taxicab drivers would shoot into bus stops a few yards ahead of the big buses and dash away with the passengers.

KING ALFONSO IN AUTO CRASH

LONDON, July 17.—(INS.)—King Alfonso of Spain narrowly escaped injury today when the limousine in which he was being driven to Buckingham Palace for luncheon with King George collided with a car driven by a woman.

Dense noonday crowds witnessed the crash. Alfonso, accompanied by his personal aides, was chatting animatedly when the other car loomed up squarely in front of the royal limousine.

The King's chauffeur tried to swerve and avoid the crash but was unsuccessful. The two cars met with an impact which smashed the glass between the tonneau, where His Majesty was sitting, and the chauffeur's seat.

Although broken glass was scattered through the tonneau, neither the King nor any of his companions was injured.

HARRY DIPPEL SERVING BEER: HE WAS ARRESTED

FIRE CHIEF SEES TUBE DANGER

City Fire Chief Richard Smith declared today that better fire-fighting apparatus is needed to remove the danger of a disastrous blaze in the Liberty tunnels.

A demonstration of the present equipment revealed that it is inadequate, Chief Smith said.

Two county policemen, Jack Edwards and "Red" Berfort, were burned yesterday when they were unable to check flames in a test of the present apparatus.

Twenty gallons of gasoline were poured into Secan street, opposite the tunnel ventilating plant, and set afire. The policemen attempted to extinguish the flames with anti-gasoline fluid in small extinguishers but failed, and were hemmed in by the blaze and their hands and faces burned.

To guarantee safety to motorists, Chief Smith suggested that portable 40-gallon extinguishers, narrow enough to be hauled along the sidewalks in the tunnels, be kept at each entrance. In case of emergency, he said, these portable extinguishers could be rushed to the scene of any fire within the tunnels.

Gerard Forecasts Franco-Italian War

NEW YORK, July 17.—(AP.)—James W. Gerard, ambassador to Germany under President Wilson, expressed the belief today, upon his return from France, that a new war is brewing, between Italy and France.

He talked to no diplomats on his visit, he said, asked if France is the aggressor, he answered:

"I should not say so. She has too much to remember of the last war. I think France fears it."

WILKES-BARRE, Pa., July 17.—(AP.)—Charged with conspiring to make fraudulent returns of the May 20 primary, 37 election board members from seven precincts in Luzerne County were named today in bench warrants issued by Judge John S. Fine.

Issuance of the warrants climaxes the sweeping investigations made in the seven districts where alleged fraud was uncovered. It is expected the election board members will enter bail for court after waiving hearings and await grand jury action.

Five of the districts are reported to have favored Francis Shunk Brown in the gubernatorial fight and two Gifford Pinchot.

Try $500,000 Suit Against Zane Grey

LOS ANGELES, July 17.—(AP.)—A $500,000 plagiarism suit against Zane Grey, author, was being heard in Federal Court here today.

Six other chorus girls, arrested with them in the raid on the musical revue, were discharged.

Miss Bacon is accused of dancing nude, with only two fans as "moral protection." Savo was principal in a window undressing scene in which Miss Carroll was one of the "wax models."

The "Vanities" was raided July 9 after a matinee performance, which was attended by Capt. James Coy, official police censor.

Schooley Stops Water Supply Of Delinquent

City Treasurer Roy D. Schooley today carried out his threat to shut off the supply of persons whose delinquent water taxes were unpaid.

The first place so affected was a four-story building at 401-3 Market street occupied on the first floor by Sable's food market. On the city's record Francis E. McGillick is listed as the building owner. The water bill, since 1927, is $248.

Fourteen other places in the First Ward may meet the same fate later today.

After the supply was cut, Sabel's store notified the treasurer's office that the check for the bill had been mailed several days ago.

Park Refuses Test Case Plea in Dog Racing

In view of District Attorney Andrew T. Park's order forbidding gambling, officials of the Gurasuta Kennel Club last night opened their race track near Blawnox and treated 300 race fans to free dog races. The 32 betting booths were dark and deserted.

Park stated today that counsel for the kennel club had asked him to co-operate in a test case to determine whether selling an interest in the dogs constituted gambling. Park refused, declaring this only a device to cheat the law.

No admission was charged last night, and it was intimated that free exhibitions would be in vogue until some definite action is taken regarding betting.

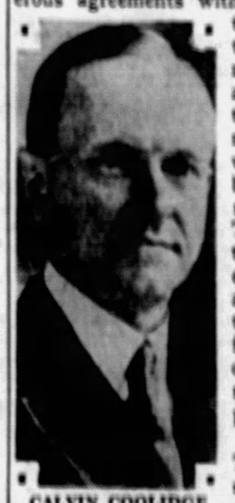
Officials, in the hole for $75,000, the amount spent on the track, deny that gambling existed at any time at the track, pointing out that the sale of tickets on dogs was on a pro rata basis.

Nations Still Arming For War, Says Coolidge

NORTHAMPTON, Mass., July 17.

To the Editor of the Sun-Telegraph:

The world does not make real progress as fast as some expected. Like backward people with free constitutions reverting to revolution, the nations have made numerous agreements with each other for peace and then turned their attention to preparation for war. In spite of all the high resolutions, all the solemn treaties, all the carefully prepared organizations set up for the peaceful adjustment of international disputes, the world is arming more heavily than before the war, and we hear too many distinct utterances of hostility. This is a disconcerting change from the spirit of the Paris Peace Conference. Then there was disagreement about reparations and allocation of territory, but absolute accord by friends and foe alike on the principle of reduction and limitation of armaments and the maintenance of peace.



CALVIN COOLIDGE

It was so nominated in the Treaty of Versailles. Germany consented to disarm on the agreement of the other parties to the treaty to disarm. Yet only the United States has proposed and secured any practical agreement for limitation of armaments. It has not been possible to secure much real reduction. The war curbed for a time but has not greatly changed the spirit of the nations.

CALVIN COOLIDGE.

GRACE TAKES STAND; MERGER RIVALS WRANGLE

BETHLEHEM SOLONS AT ISSUE

Foes of Sale Seek to Show Magnate Gets $1,600,000 a Year; Purnell Under Fire

YOUNGSTOWN, O., July 17.—(AP.)—Eugene G. Grace, president of Bethlehem Steel Corporation, mounted the witness stand today in the suit to enjoin merger of the Youngstown Sheet and Tube Company with his firm, and touched off a legal battle that promised to wage far into the session.

Almost the first question asked Grace by attorneys for the Cyrus S. Eaton interests, foes of the merger, was:

"How much do you receive in salary, bonuses and other emoluments from the Bethlehem Steel Corporation?"

F. H. Wood of counsel for the defense was on his feet immediately with the expected objection. Grace was left a silent witness while counsel argued over the propriety of introducing his reputed salary of $1,600,000 into evidence.

SALARY AT ISSUE

Plaintiffs' attorneys contended his salary is important to their case, for they have charged in the suit that stockholders of the Youngstown company should have been, but were not informed of its size before they ratified the merger on April 8 this year.

The argument was the second legal clash of the day. Just before Grace was called to the stand, the attorneys argued over an audit now being made of Bethlehem's books under court order. Plaintiffs' attorney claimed it impossible to determine the profits of Bethlehem last year without knowledge of costs, while defense attorneys contended an investigation of specific costs would be unfair, since that is an item carefully guarded by every manufacturer.

The court reminded counsel they cannot limit each others' rights and assured the defense he intended to protect Bethlehem insofar as legitimate trade secrets were concerned. Defense attorneys offered to furnish figures on general costs and the court deferred any action until the attorneys have opportunity to agree.

FRAUD ALLEGED

In arguing the admissability of Grace's salary, Attorney Luther Day, of Cleveland, chief counsel for the Eaton interest, charged that the concealment of the salary from the Youngstown stockholders constituted a fraud, and further that Bethlehem gets no adequate return for the money paid to Grace. The defense held Grace's salary was a personal affair with no bearing on the issues in the case.

Bethlehem waived an excess property account of $170,000,000 when it offered to merge on a basis of one and one-third shares of its own stock to one of Youngstown, according to testimony yesterday of Frank Purnell, president of the Youngstown company who was on the stand two full days.

QUIZZED ON EXPOSE

One of the issues in the suit on which he was questioned at length concerned his own expose of the merger terms before the Youngstown board of directors on March 12, this year, when they approved the deal. The Eaton interests charged the officers of the Youngstown company concealed the true facts on the values of the two concerns, and by so doing effected the merger fraudulently.

Relating his part in the Youngstown directors' meeting, Purnell said:

"I told the directors without any question the Youngstown company could probably work out its own salvation, but it would take a tremendous amount of money and it would not give us the diversification of products and locations."

Purnell said they discussed the question of merging with the Inland Steel Company, pointing out that Inland had a Chicago location and that since the Inland's first deal broke up, in 1928, Sheet and Tube had spent $12,000,000 for bar mills and steel plants in the Chicago district.

CEDAR CITY, Utah, July 17.—(AP.) The long search for Maurice Graham, Western Air Express air mail pilot, missing since January, ended yesterday when his body was found six miles from where his wrecked plane was discovered late in June.

Maj. Richard N. McDonald, war time flying companion of the dead air mail pilot, led a small searching party that discovered the long sought body in underbrush along a stream in the Kanarra Mountains, 22 miles southeast of here.

NOISE KILLS human beings slowly but surely undermining health. And while it is killing them, it makes them less efficient.

New York City's government proposes to kill noise in its new subways. Turnstiles are to be free of rattle and bang, and tubes are to be soundproof.

If the city can accomplish that many shortcomings will be forgiven.

EVERY CIVILIZED city should take up the noise question, the howling horns of automobiles, the miserable devices attached to the exhaust, etc. And communities along railroad tracks should take up with their railroad managements the unnecessary, horrible screeching of locomotives.

GET HOOVER'S CONSENT

The cloture petition was quickly signed by 16 senators, the number required for its presentation to the Senate. Watson announced he would hold it for a while, to see whether we can reach any agreement to fix a time for a vote on the treaty.

Before the session convened, Senator Watson visited President Hoover and secured the executive's consent to impose cloture. The President's consent was required because the treaty's advocates disagreed over the wisdom of imposing gag rule in the consideration of a treaty, involving the national defense.

This was the point raised by Johnson. He challenged the administration to gag senators in a debate over the national defense and the strength of the American navy, declaring:

"I am engaged here in a task that far transcends in importance the leadership of the Senator from Indiana.

DESIRES NO QUARTER

"I ask no quarter. I know no other way to fight when fighting for my country than to die. I am willing, so far as his treaty is concerned, to have the Administration and the Senator from Indiana do what they please. I am asking no mercy.

WILL PROTECT RIGHTS

"I shall protect my rights so far as I can. I shall defend my country as I see the light. I shall present to the people of the United States the iniquities of this treaty so long as I physically can.

"Well, 'lay on MacDuff—and damned be he who first cries, hold, enough!'"

JOHNSON THEN DEMURS

Watson first sought an agreement to fix the time for a vote on the treaty, then to limit debate beginning Tuesday. Johnson objected to both proposals. Watson asked:

"Is the Senator ready to agree upon a time to vote?"

The Californian replied:

"He is not."

Watson then asked:

"Is the Senator ready to agree beginning next Tuesday at 11 o'clock to limit debate to 10 minutes for each Senator who desires to speak?"

Johnson replied:

"I will not."

Then Watson said:

"I desire to serve notice that we will meet Saturday."

Johnson countered:

"May I suggest to the Senator that we meet Sunday also?"

Watson retorted:

"You may, but I will not agree to that. There will be Thursday, Friday, Saturday and Monday in which Senators will have additional time to express themselves.

JUST TAKING UP TIME

"There is no desire to shut off debate, but it became evident yesterday that speeches were being made for the purpose of taking up time. I am mentioning no names. It is my desire to prevent talking for the purpose of dissipating a quorum. It was said frankly that one speech was being made yesterday for the purpose of taking up time until the return to the city of a Senator.

"If we have the majority I think we have, we will resort to the only method by which we may get a vote."

Senator Robinson, (Rep.), of Indiana, interrupted to remark that less than two weeks had been spent in consideration of the treaty.

ANGERED BY CLOTURE

The threat of cloture infuriated Johnson. He shouted:

"It is strange that cloture is only imposed when the Senate acts upon a foreign adventure or foreign misadventure. But I will make no agreement. I shall go on as best I can and when God no longer permits me to speak, I will take my medicine. Move on with your cloture. I challenge you to put cloture on a treaty that deals with the national defense."

The flow of reservations meanwhile continued. With three already pending, Senator Hale (Rep.), of Maine, announced he would submit one giving the United States the right, under Section 19, to build the type of ships she needs. He said he would offer this in a day or two.

SPENT $30,000 IN PRIMARIES, CROWE SAYS

Ex-State's Attorney Tells Nye Quiz That Little Went To Help Mrs. McCormick

CHICAGO, July 17.—(AP.)—Robert E. Crowe, former State's Attorney for Cook County, told the Senate Campaign Funds Committee here today that he had spent about $30,000 of his own funds during the last Republican primary campaign in the county, in which he supported the candidacy of Mrs. Ruth Hanna McCormick for the Senate.

Crowe said he used virtually all the funds to carry on the campaign for various county and state legislative offices, only incidentally mentioning Mrs. McCormick in a few minor bits of advertising. He declared he had no association with her candidacy other than his voluntary indorsement of Mrs. McCormick. The former state's attorney explained that he favored Mrs. McCormick against Senator Charles S. Deneen because she opposed the League Court.

MAY CALL LEWIS

Senator Gerald P. Nye, chairman of the inquiry, announced that he would make known later in the day whether he would summon James Hamilton Lewis, Democratic senatorial nominee, to question him about his remark that the Republican senatorial campaign cost $1,000,000 and it increasingly appears Mrs. McCormick used the most of it.

He also declared he would recess the inquiry after today's hearing, until Mrs. Mabel Reinecke, former internal revenue collector, can be found and brought before the committee.

Mrs. McCormick was recalled and asked when and where she voted on election day.

"Of course you voted?" Senator Nye asked.

"I sure did," Mrs. McCormick replied, "at my home in Byron, Ill."

Senator Nye then asked her about the $10,000 check she received shortly before the end of the primary campaign from Col. R. R. McCormick, her brother-in-law.

HAD CHECK CASHED.

She said she had it indorsed and it was cashed by some one of her staff, the money being placed in a vault in her office where it now is. She said she wanted to keep it separate from her own funds which she used in her campaign, and had not returned it to Col. McCormick since he told her to keep it for use in her fall campaign.

Mrs. McCormick said she had several similar contributions not used in the primary with which she would open an account for the fall campaign against Lewis. She could not recall just when she had the $10,000 check cashed or who cashed it.

She said these funds would be accounted for in her fall report, "down to every lead pencil and postage stamp."

INDIAN LEADERS TO ASK PEACE

SIMLA, India, July 17.—(AP.)—Viceroy Irwin has agreed to permit Sir Tej Sapru and M. Jayakar, Indian leaders, to see Mahatma Gandhi and two of the other Nationalist leaders now in jail, with a view of persuading them to restore peace in the civil disobedience campaign.

The viceroy in a letter to Sir Tej Sapru and Jayaka repeated the assurance given in his recent address before the Indian Legislature regarding the government's desire that Indians should manage their own affairs, subject to temporary safeguards in the sphere in which full responsibility is not yet possible.

The two Indian leaders will conduct their negotiations with Mahatma Gandhi on their own responsibility.

BUFFALO, July 17.—(AP.)—Norman E. Bernhardt, 24, a former clerk in the bond department of the Marine Trust Company here, was married Saturday and went on a secret honeymoon.

Today, he was being sought by detectives to explain a $60,000 shortage in his accounts.

Blue Law

What Outstanding People Think Of It

(Each day for awhile the Sun-Telegraph will ask opinions of leading citizens on the state's antique Blue Law. The third group is presented below.)

Honus Wagner

JOHN "HONUS" WAGNER, president of Honus Wagner Sporting Goods Company and described by John McGraw as "the greatest baseball player of all"—I am in favor of permitting sports and amusements of all kinds on Sunday to persons who have their cares punched showing they have been to church that day.

F. L. Andrews

F. L. ANDREWS, manager of William Penn Hotel—The Blue Sunday of Pennsylvania has given Pittsburgh a singular and undesirable reputation among the large cities of the country as a place to avoid. Not only does this old statutory prohibition deprive the people of the city of suitable and necessary recreation but it deprives the city of business and money which would be spent here if that business were not lost. In this hotel alone I estimate that at least 100 prospective patrons are lost each week because of the severe Pennsylvania Sunday. The trade which these 5,000 visitors annually would have brought to this city and the money which would otherwise be distributed among the people of the city may be multiplied many times as a total loss to the city. Visitors frequently go East to spend their weekends and many leave here for lake cities like Cleveland and Detroit to escape the rigors of a Pittsburgh Sunday. Traveling men often prefer to spend Sundays in small towns in West Virginia and Ohio rather than come here.

Stadtlander

WILLIAM F. STADTLANDER, member of the Legislature—The Blue Law remains on the books awaiting a determined movement representing the whole majority of the people of the state demanding its amendment. This ancient and ignored statute deserves to go the way of all other legal relics which have long outlived their usefulness. The people of today do not want their habits restricted by a law which is suitable only to the colonial days in which it was passed.

T. C. McMahon

THOMAS C. McMAHON, chief of the Board of Assessors of the City of Pittsburgh—The closed Sunday has affected Pittsburgh adversely in diverting business and industries from this city, and in the end this has an indirect effect upon the value of property. Skilled workers avoid Pittsburgh as a place in which to live and lines of skilled industry, which seek the best markets for skilled labor, go elsewhere. Workers will accept less pay in cities such as Cleveland or Detroit rather than locate in Pittsburgh with restricted opportunities for Sunday recreation. As a result, Pittsburgh employers pay higher compensation in many lines and thereby bear the burden of this restraint upon our working population. I have observed in other large cities where Sunday laws are more liberal that the people are at least as law-abiding, as moral and as given to religious observance as in Pittsburgh.

Four Brothers Seek New York Golf Cup

NEW YORK, July 17.—(AP.)—The Ciucis are out after the metropolitan open golf championship. Henry, Al and Floyd, pros, and Dick, a schoolboy, are doing their utmost to see that the title comes to the family after a three-day tourney, starting today.

2 Oklahoma Men Die In Electric Chair

STATE PENITENTIARY, McAlester, Okla., July 17.—(AP.)—Tom Guest, 47, convicted murderer, and James E. Forrest, 23-year-old Negro, sentenced for an assault upon a white woman, paid with their lives in the electric chair here early today.

Youth Hunted in $7,550 Downtown Jewel Theft

City detectives today began a search for a 14-year-old boy who escaped with a black leather bag containing jewelry valued at $7,550 from the buyers' office in Gimbels department store yesterday afternoon.

The bag, containing three bracelets and three rings, with a total value of $7,550, was left in the room by Miss Adella Brandwin, a buyer, who noted its disappearance a few minutes later, according to detectives.

Description of the boy suspected of the theft was furnished by a floorwalker with whom he collided with such force that he fell as he ran out of the office.

The floorwalker, believing him employed at the store, did not question him, detectives said.

Tonsils Revealed as Cause Of Children's Slowness

NEW YORK, July 17.—(Universal.)—Infected tonsils are an important cause of moronism or mental backwardness. This is particularly the case among young boys and girls.

Conversely, tonsillectomy, or removal of bad tonsils, results in startling mental improvement. The physical benefits of the operation are even more positive.

This has been discovered by Drs. John D. Monroe and V. K. Volk, commissioner and deputy commissioner of public health of Pontiac, Oakland County, Mich., they reveal in a report to the American Journal of Public Health.

Monroe and Volk experimented upon two sets of children who suffered from the same types of mental and physical ailments. One set of 736 children was used as experimentals, that is, was operated on. The other one of 741 was not operated on. After six months, one year and nearly two years, the comparative results were briefly these:

Between 91 and 94 per cent of the patients whose tonsils were removed showed most marked improvements, mental as well as physical. But, no similar turn for the better was found among the other group.

Out of 148 cases of subnormal mentalities and backwardness in school work, only 57 failed to show improvement after six months to a year. The rest showed remarkable benefits.

money transactions except purchase of tickets. No test of the beer was made before seizure, he asserted.

POLICEMEN ON JOB

William Geise, dry agent, testified to seeing beer carried by Negroes from the barroom to men in a tent. Policemen were directing the parking of cars, he said.

Arthur Bressler, a third agent, told of seizing four full barrels and two partly filled barrels of beer.

The beer analyzed 3.78 per cent alcohol by volume, O. B. Mahaffie, government chemist, testified.

Dipple testified on direct examination by Attorney John R. Frankel:

"I was only an invited guest and bought a ticket like the rest. I went behind the bar and helped myself to drinks as others were doing. The beer didn't taste good. Considering the chicken dinner, I don't see how they could serve good beer at $2.50."

Drumm also testified he was a guest and not employed. A man who couldn't attend gave him his ticket, he testified. He denied he served drinks behind the bar. Price was not called to the stand.

Attorney James V. Piper of the prohibition legal staff conducted the prosecution.

Word of the raid spread quickly. Several of the most prominent guests made their exits quickly. Crowds gathered around the raiders, murmuring their disapproval.

The sporting events, gambling chiefly, came to an abrupt end. The dice table and paddle wheel counter were deserted in a flash.

The agents went about their work of loading the confiscated beer into a waiting truck, and left the scene almost as quickly as they had come, but the jollity had gone out of the picnickers, who slowly drifted away to their cars and left.

PROMINENT GUESTS

Among the more prominent guests at the picnic were District Attorney Andrew T. Park, President of City Council John S. Herron and several other councilmen and burgesses and township officials from various parts of the county.

Uniformed policemen from Stowe Township were on the grounds directing traffic and assisting club officials generally where needed.

As to his presence at the picnic, the district attorney explained:

"I only just dropped in to pay my respects to club members and friends, and I saw nothing out of the way. I saw no gambling. I had left before the raid."

Councilman Herron said:

"I had just arrived when the federal officers came in. I was just about to enter the dining room and was far too busy meeting old friends and making new ones to know much about what was going on."

State Senator Frank J. Harris, a leader in Amen Corner affairs and prominent in its picnic arrangements, was nowhere to be found after the raid. He had attended the outing. He has the reputation of never having taken a drink.

JUST DROPPED IN

Director of Public Works Edward G. Lang, who yesterday returned to his desk after a trip abroad, declared he did not know there had been a raid. He said:

"I only stopped in for a few minutes and then returned to my office."

Police Magistrate John J. Sweeney, Councilman Clifford B. Connelley and Representative J. G. Steedle, other guests, had nothing to say.

Burgess Al G. Hagmaier of Aspinwall, saying he arrived only a short time before the federal agents, added:

"I saw nothing out of the way."

H. P. Vitte, township commissioner of Mt. Lebanon, said he thought the beverage seized by the Federal officers was near beer.

"I was standing right at the bar and I had a glass in my hand when they came in," he said. "I drank several glasses and I'm positive it was nothing but near beer."

CAVANAUGH PROUD

Homestead's burgess, John P. Cavanaugh, only two days ago appointed to membership on the county board for revision of taxes, spoke proudly of his presence at the picnic and boasted of having his picture taken. He declared:

"Why, I'd sooner have my picture taken in that crowd before the prohibition agents came than have it taken alongside that 'Two-Gun' Wilson."

Others among the guests including Attorney J. Howard Devlin, Robert A. Merron, burgess of West Homestead, Fire Chief Richard L. Smith, Ben Anderson, secretary to E. V. Babcock, and Fred E. Obley, secretary of the Amen Club. They could not be reached at their homes.

Councilman Michael J. Muldowney, who was one of the liveliest of the picnickers in the afternoon, had "gone out of town" according to members of his family when inquiries were made at his home later.

Charles H. Geisler, general chairman of the outing, had little to say. Asked whether the beverage so generously dispensed to the guests was "high-powered beer," he replied:

"I doubt it very much."

Two Suspended as Speech On India Stirs Commons

LONDON, July 17. (AP)—The House of Commons was thrown into a tumult this afternoon when Fenner Brockway, Labor member, in the middle of the question period, insisted upon delivering a speech on India. Prime Minister MacDonald moved his suspension for disobeying the chair.

After the vote, one of the tellers, a Laborite, John Beckett, scandalized the chamber by seizing the mace, the House's emblem of authority, and running down the floor with it.

The mace was recovered amid scenes of great excitement.

Members steeped in traditions of the sacredness of the Commons' prestige and dignity were horrified at the incident and loud protests came from both sides of the chamber.

Beckett's suspension also was voted 324 to 4. Brockway and Beckett left the House together.

WALSH FOUGHT BY ANTI-DRY

WASHINGTON, July 17. (INS)—Another wet and dry senatorial contest was assured today for decision in the November election as a result of the Montana primary.

Judge Albert J. Galen, Republican, an uncompromising foe of prohibition, will oppose in November Senator Thomas J. Walsh, the veteran Democratic incumbent who is now completing his eighteenth year in the upper House.

Senator Walsh has had a brilliant career in the Senate which includes the prosecution of the oil scandals. Ordinarily he would be considered a safe bet for reelection. Yet Galen is such an outstanding figure in the state and the prohibition issue is so keen that the Democrats are acutely worried over his chances.

Diver's Bill Recalls Loeb-Leopold Case

CHICAGO, July 17. (AP)—The Loeb-Leopold case reechoed in the records today with a bill presented to the city council by Frank Ropke.

TUNNEL BLAST HOLD 2, FINE 6 KILLS TWELVE IN LOTTERY

CAMP MITCHELL, Cal., July 17. (AP)—A gas explosion killed an entire shift of 12 men in the tunnel of the Hetch-Hetchy project, San Francisco municipal water area, early today.

Engineers said a natural gas pocket probably had been struck in boring and the gas accidentally ignited.

The tunnel drops straight downward for more than 800 feet from the surface and then branches into a drive to the east and one to the west. Those killed were in the east drift. Thirteen men in the west drift, which goes down about 1,500 feet, were badly shaken and some were gassed but all were brought to the surface. None was seriously hurt.

Two bodies were recovered almost immediately but the gas flow soon drove rescuers to the use of masks.

The bodies of John McNichols, 42, shift boss, and J. C. Maybin, 21, were recovered.

POPE FOREGOES SUMMER TRIP

VATICAN CITY, July 17. (INS)—Pressing affairs of the church and lack of acequate preparations for an outside sojourn today determined Pope Pius XI to forego his projected vacation at the Papal summer grounds.

With the signing of the lateran treaties the Pontiff planned to forsake Rome during the baking summer heat and resume the old custom of the popes to spend at least part of the summer at a country chateau about 100 miles from here. Failure to complete renovation plans of the old summer palace prevented the carrying out of these intentions this year.

The Papal exit from here would have been the first trip away from Vatican grounds of any Pope since the year 1870.

Mrs. Hoover Talks to Pupils At Dark Hollow School

WASHINGTON, July 17.—Mrs. Herbert Hoover drove today to the Virginia mountains to visit the school at Dark Hollow that she and the President helped to found.

She desired to talk with the pupils before the school closes its first term, tomorrow. She was accompanied by Mrs. Stark McMullin, of Palo Alto, Cal., a White House guest.

For the first time in more than three months Mrs. Hoover appeared at a public White House function yesterday.

Apparently fully recovered from the effects of a wrenched back suffered in slipping upon a rug, the first lady presided at the annual garden party for injured veterans of the World War.

Smiling and gracious, Mrs. Hoover greeted some 800 maimed doughboys who are still making the good fight at Walter Reed Hospital here. Those able to walk hobbled past her in a receiving line. Others wholly disabled or who lost their sight in France, were favored by having Mrs. Hoover come to them with a word of cheer and encouragement.

GOLDSBOROUGH RITES IN N.Y.

BENNINGTON, Vt., July 17. (INS)—Accompanied by his mother, Mrs. Gertrude Goldsborough, and his grief-stricken friend, Donald R. Mockler, lecturer and writer, the body of America's boy flying champion, Frank Goldsborough, was to be taken today to New York for burial.

The 19-year old flier died in a hospital here late yesterday from a fractured skull received when his plane crashed in the nearby mountains Monday in a heavy fog.

Young Goldsborough's career ended on his birthday and three years after his father, Brice Goldsborough, was lost with the plane Dawn, which disappeared in fog on an attempted flight across the Atlantic.

Frank, holder of the junior transcontinental record, succumbed to his injuries without regaining full consciousness. His mother and Mockler were at his bedside when the end came. He had been brought to the hospital 18 hours before, after he had lain for almost a day under his wrecked plane, while Mockler, who escaped injury in the crash, sought aid.

LINGLE KILLING PROBE RENEWED

CHICAGO, July 17. (INS)—Proceeding independently of other authorities, the Cook County grand jury today was reported ready to delve in wholesale fashion into the gangland slaying of Alfred J. Lingle, the reporter known as Chicago's "unofficial police chief."

Four widely known personages in Chicago's official and unofficial life are expected to be on the grand jury's list of witnesses. They are former Police Commissioner William Russell, intimate friend of Lingle; former Chief of Detectives John Stege; Samuel Ettelson, corporation counsel, and Alphonse (Scarface) Capone, millionaire gangster.

The belief that Capone, a close friend of the slain reporter, fears he will be asked to testify was strengthened today when his attorney, J. F. Gordon, said Capone will postpone his return from Miami for another two weeks.

Frankie Foster, gangster owner of the gun which killed Lingle, is being rushed here from Los Angeles by airplane. Foster was indicted for the murder of Lingle and was extradited.

SURVEY RADIO SERVICE HERE

Inspectors of the Federal Radio Commission will arrive in Pittsburgh shortly to checkup on the value of local stations to the listening public. The investigation will be part of a nation-wide survey ordered by William D. Terrell, chief inspector of the Federal Radio Commission. Mr. Terrell explained to the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph:

"Pursuant to the commission's request I have instructed the nine federal radio supervisors in the field to make an appraisal of the services of all broadcasting stations to the public. The radio division never before has made a program survey, but our men are just about as well qualified as any to do it."

With the results of the research it is proposed to work out a system of rating stations according to program merit. Such a proposal was considered during radio investigation last year by the Senate Committee on Interstate Commerce.

Best baby in county!

Always happy and comfortable; free from colds

OF COURSE every family has a "best" baby in it. But some babies are a lot nicer than others just the same. And that is so largely a matter of health. For psychologists and medical men say that good nature in babies is dependent largely on their comfort. They are too little to tell you what ails them. So they cry. And you have to guess it's a rash, or chafed skin, or a stopped-up nose.

That is, you guess, unless you are wise enough to prevent these troubles with the handy "Vaseline" jar.

For "Vaseline" Petroleum Jelly is an essential part of any baby outfit. Apply it to the baby's skin after the bath; to the head too; then take little swabs of cotton on toothpicks, dip it into the Jelly, and very gently apply to the baby's nostrils. This cleanses and lubricates. Tends to prevent colds.

These are easy, safe things to do. Ask your doctor. "Vaseline" Jelly has been used by mothers and doctors and hospitals for half a century.

GRADE CROSSING REMOVAL PLAN PROTESTED

Glenshaw Firm, in Asking Change, Cites Fire Hazard; Offers Counter Proposal

The Ball Chemical Company, of Glenshaw, protested today to the Public Service Commission against the plans of the State Highway Department for elimination of three grade crossings on the old Butler Plank road.

At a hearing before Commissioner C. A. Young in the City-County Building the company offered a compromise plan, contending it would represent a saving of $40,000.

SEE FIRE HAZARD

Objection by the chemical company to the state's proposal centered chiefly about the contemplated widening of the present road 10 feet near the site of the company's plant. This it was contended, would compel the company to place its railroad siding directly against the plant and would increase fire hazards from the shipment of inflammable material.

The counter proposal submitted by the chemical company involves encroachment upon the property of the Glenshaw Glass Company and condemnation of two private dwellings. Samuel A. Duff, engineer called in behalf of the chemical company, estimated that the compromise plan would save $40,000.

NOT TO CROSS TRACKS

Elimination of the three grade crossings, one at Wittmer, one at Mt. Royal and the third between Wittmer and Glenshaw, would involve the relocation of the present line of the Butler Plank road for approximately two miles. The relocated road would not cross the railroad tracks.

The State Highway Department, the County of Allegheny and the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, which is to pay half the costs of the improvement, have all agreed on the plan opposed by the chemical company.

PITT FRAT PAYS BOLIVAR HONOR

Pedro Rivero, attache of the Venezuelan legation in Washington and poet and writer, spoke yesterday afternoon at a Simon Bolivar tea in the Heinz House of the University of Pittsburgh. He traced the life of the "George Washington of South America"—the Venezuelan patriot who fought for the formation of the nations below the Isthmus. The tea was held by the Phi Alpha Theta, honorary history fraternity. Other speakers were Dr. N. Andrew N. Cleven and Dr. John Oliver, professors of history at Pitt.

Bolivar, called the Liberator, will be honored throughout the world in December, when the centenary of his death will be observed. Senor Rivero spoke of the genius, the ability to sacrifice, the heroism and determination of Simon Bolivar.

A program of Venezuelan dancing and music was presented. Mascura Colucci dancing.

THE LOW COST OF LIVING » » »

For months food prices have been slowly but steadily coming down. Over production, new tariffs and the stock market have all had their part in bringing foods, as well as other commodities, to lower price levels... in many instances to prewar figures. These decreases have been constantly reflected at McCann's. ¶ For instance, for the past seven months our famous butter has been priced on an average of nine cents (9c) less a pound than it was during the same period last year. Coffee averages a twenty-four and one-third percent (24⅓) decrease on our three brands. These are but two of the savings our customers have enjoyed since last December. ¶ Every department in this complete food market offers food needs today at decided reductions over last year's prices. And, of course, the high standard of quality, on which this store has built a reputation "for absolute reliability", prevails. McCann's never sacrifices quality (and incidentally the health of patrons) to feature price.

PHILCO TONE-CONTROL
will amaze you

"Brilliant," "bright," "mellow," "deep"—you can turn the Philco Tone Control to your choice of these four positions of tone quality. Now, with your own hand, in your own home, you can change the tone of radio stations and programs to suit your tastes and moods.

Philco Tone Control is your personal touch to radio reception. Bring in your favorite jazz band with the crisp, snappy tone of dance-floor reality. Bring in classical music, great singers, famous speakers, with the particular tonal pitch best suited for each.

And for radio stations which come in harshly in your locality, or are marred by "interference," turn Tone Control to "mellow" or "deep," thus reducing noise and stridency so you can enjoy many additional fine programs. Truly, Philco Tone Control is the Newest Miracle of Radio.

Philco also offers this year another distinctive feature . . . a New Station Recording Dial, so designed that you can permanently log your favorite stations and thus tune in the programs you regularly listen to with ease and facility. Regular equipment on every model.

NT DAY

f Its Kind in America

Days and nights---and many of both---have been spent literally combing the entire store---basement to roof---"spotting" every single item in the establishment that should be cleared out ---regardless of cause---age, color, or too large stock---odd, mussed, etc.---every item fixed with a red ink price (Red Ink Prices are used only on Remnant Days)---a price that positively assures the sale of that item. That explains why Remnant Days here are so famous.

To the PATRONS and DEALERS of the WAVERLY OIL WORKS COMPANY

As a refiner and marketer of petroleum products in Western Pennsylvania, the Waverly Oil Works Company for many years has prided itself upon its friendly relationships with its patrons and its hundreds of dealers. It has always striven to manufacture fine products and make the purchase of these products easy for its customers through the maintenance of adequate outlet facilities, service of the highest order and an undeviating policy of fair treatment for all.

Due to certain changes in the transportation and distribution of gasoline, it has been deemed advisable to dispose of our gasoline marketing facilities through service stations and dealers.

To this end, beginning July 16th, this branch of the company is being taken over by the Standard Oil Company of Pennsylvania which will supply present customers of the Waverly Service Stations and Dealers with "Standard" products, including "Standard" Gasoline and Esso, the Giant Power Fuel.

For years the Waverly Oil Works Company has enjoyed the highest regard for the Standard Oil Company (N. J.) of which the Standard Oil Company of Pennsylvania is a 100% subsidiary and knows them to be fair with their employees, their dealers and the public.

The character of their service and the quality of their products are well known.

We feel assured that our dealers and customers will benefit through continued patronage of our successors.

ATTACK DRIVER, 3 ARRESTED

Alleged to have run down and attacked a motorist on Mt. Washington early today, three Negroes were held, following a hearing before Magistrate J. J. Sweeney in Mt. Washington Police Court. They are William Briggs, 22, 506 Taft avenue; Thomas Bishop, 24, and Otis Bishop, 22, 601 West Warrington avenue.

Boy Admitting Nine Holdups Resentenced

Fifteen-year-old Charles Marlin of Strauss street, who escaped from the training schools at Thornton and Morganza, today was resentenced to Huntingdon Reform School by Judge Gardner in Criminal Court after he had pleaded guilty to nine hold-ups and the theft of five automobiles.

M'DONALD GOES TO AID MOONEY

NEW YORK, July 17.—AP.—John MacDonald, elderly widower, departed soon to prove the innocence of Thomas J. Mooney and Warren K. Billings, labor agitators now serving life terms in California on charges growing out of a Preparedness Day bomb parade, left last night for the West Coast.

Charles Rumsha and Henry Gale, attorneys who accompanied MacDonald here from Baltimore, said their client admitted perjury and desired to relieve his conscience by telling the truth, now, regardless of the personal danger involved in the admission.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 17.—AP.—Police Capt. Charles Goff, accused by John MacDonald of having coached him to identify Thomas J. Mooney and Warren K. Billings following their arrest for the Preparedness Day parade bombing here today gave his own version of the affair denying MacDonald's story.

Constable John Weiner of Wilkins Township arrested them yesterday near the Rock road when motorists made complaint.

They were given hearings before Justice of the Peace R. C. Bennett of Turtle Creek and sent to jail last night when they failed to pay their fines.

ROBBED BY PAIR GIVEN LIFT

At the Hulton Bridge today, Calvin F. Cherry of Oakmont, New Kensington agent for the Prudential Life Insurance Company, picked up in his auto two poorly-dressed young men who had asked for a lift.

KONJOLA FREES SUFFERER, 73, OF RHEUMATISM

Suffered For Seven Years—Stomach Trouble Also Ended—All Other Medicines Tried Failed.

What encouragement for all who suffer, and who have failed to find relief, there is to be found in the indorsements won by Konjola, the new and different medicine. One of the interesting stories you would have heard had you been the Konjola Man is that of Mr. W. L. Guthrie, 73, of 15 Grove Street, Washington, near Pittsburgh, who told what Konjola had done for him. The Konjola Man, who is at the Dow Drug Store, Penn Avenue and Sixth Street, Pittsburgh, is at the service of all who wish to find out about Konjola. Call there and hear the wonderful story of this wonderful medicine. Read the words of Mr. Guthrie, who said to the Konjola Man a few days ago:

MR. W. L. GUTHRIE

"Although I am 73 years old, Konjola worked wonders in my case, and I want to tell everyone who suffers as I once did what Konjola did for me. About six or seven years ago I became afflicted with rheumatism and stomach trouble. The dreadful rheumatic pains settled in my left arm, hip, leg and shoulder. The pains were almost unbearable, and none of the medicines I took helped me. Then the stomach trouble developed. After each meal I bloated with gas and suffered such miseries that I lost all my appetite. Constipation made matters worse by allowing poisons to gather in my system.

"In just three weeks Konjola made me feel years younger. It cleansed my system and completely restored my digestion. Then it drove every rheumatic pain from my body. Constipation, too, is a thing of the past. I eat, sleep, and feel like a different person. No words of mine can ever describe my gratitude for Konjola."

Konjola works its wonders for young and old. It is, indeed, a medicine for all the family.

The Konjola Man is at the Dow Drug Store, Penn Avenue and Sixth Street, Pittsburgh, where he is meeting the public daily, explaining the merits of this new and different medicine. FREE SAMPLES GIVEN by the Konjola Man. Konjola is sold by all Dow Drug Stores in Pittsburgh and vicinity.

SENATE VOTES TARIFF QUIZ

WASHINGTON, July 16 (AP).—Three more resolutions requesting tariff commission investigations into differences in cost of production here and abroad of more than a dozen commodities were adopted yesterday by the Senate.

One, by Senator McNary (Rep.), Oregon, seeks cost information on fir, spruce, hemlock, pine and larch lumber and timber produced in the Pacific Northwest.

A second resolution, by Senator Sheppard (Dem.), Texas, deals with cocoanut oil and copra from the Philippines and palm, palm kernel, rapeseed, whale, perilla and sesame oil.

Under a third, by Senator Copeland (Dem.), New York, the commission will inquire into production costs on olive oil, cheese, cherries, canned tomatoes, tomato paste, confectionery, chocolates and laminated products in sheets.

RAIL CROSSING HEARING HELD

Samuel Walker, of the Public Service Commission, heard the application of the Department of Highways of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, to eliminate a dangerous crossing on the Pittsburgh and West Virginia Railroad near Woodrow, Washington County. The railroad company is objecting to certain features of the plan and contends the state should pay for the changes which are to be made. The highway will be carried under the railroad tracks at a point about a one-half mile east of Woodrow, the route leading from Bridgeville by way of Hickory and Avella.

EAT, Brother, EAT!

What a Different World when Appetite is Keener!

YOUR whole attitude toward food changes when appetite is keen. Your own doctor will tell you it is just as important to enjoy your food as to eat it.

Some folks just eat because it's meal-time. To them, eating is mechanical—a problem, not a pleasure. But what a treat awaits these men and women when once they realize how sharpened appetite lends magic flavor to every blessed morsel.

To dull and drowsy appetites Flaxolyn cries "awake!" It is a sluggish, stubborn appetite indeed, that will not respond to the effective stimulation to the appetite, which Flaxolyn can bring.

But Flaxolyn is not alone an appetizer. It is a formula with other important functions, direct and indirect. Yet Flaxolyn is gentle in its action. It is a combination of dried herbs and bile salts with highly approved medicinal extracts. No drastic or habit-forming drugs.

Flaxolyn contains Sarsaparilla Roots, Valerian (from Belgium), Dandelion Roots, Licorice (from Spain), Aloes (from Barbadoes Islands), Ginger, Senna Leaves, Buchu Leaves (from Africa), and other potent herbs.

Right here in this neighborhood Flaxolyn has proved a tremendous success. Thousands seeking an aid to keener appetite, richer sleep and freedom from temporary constipation's tax upon the body, are today using Flaxolyn. Many of these men and women are your own age.

Perhaps you, too, will benefit by the Flaxolyn formula. Why not try it and see? Flaxolyn is Free if you personally are not convinced it is all and more than claimed for it.

We Now Present

By DARRELL V. MARTIN
Radio Editor.

THE LIGHTWEIGHT CHAMPIONSHIP bout between Sammy Mandell and Al Singer will be broadcast from the Yankee Stadium ringside over KDKA at 10 o'clock tonight. Graham McNamee will give a word picture of the 15-round battle.

Joe Cook, of "Vanities" fame, will do a radio comeback after two years' absence. As guest star of the RCA Hour on WCAE at 10, Joe will probably sing numbers from "Rain or Shine," which has been made into a movie. No matter what he does, we anticipate the pleasure of hearing his sprightly patter once more.

The Sunshine Hour, WCAE, at 8, will have Ohman and Arden as the main attraction. These boys started to fame as entertainers in the original Roxy's Gang.

Laying aside his baton for a few minutes in the Melody Moments' program, WCAE at 9:30, Eugene Ormandy will play the beautiful Saint-Saens' "The Swan," with harp accompaniment.

Toscha Seidel on WJAS at 9:30, Arabesque on WJAS at 9 and the Lucky Dance on KDKA at 8 will be other excellent features.

BEST LAST NIGHT:

Although one of the greatest newspapermen of his age, Irvin S. Cobb is human. During his broadcast on trout fishing he spoke of President Hoover as the "present incumbent," which is almost as bad English as "widow of the late."

* * *

This little discrepancy was discovered by the alert George Connell, an eagle-eyed copy reader for the Sun-Tele. He keeps in practice reading "We Now Present."

The Argentines have some kind of an interest in the big fight at New York tonight, so KDKA will short wave it for them on 19 and 25 meters.

Jack Parker, tenor of the Kodak Hour, WJAS every Thursday night, is captain-owner of the racing sloop, "Anjean," but he can't swim a stroke.

Bill Hetznecker, Emporium-bound today on a fish hunt, is accused of buying mackerel for his friends when the angling is poor.

Howard Petrie, latest addition to the NBC staff of announcers, is 6 feet, 4 inches tall.

Good luck to Jimmie Taylor, KQV dramatist, who takes an NBC audition next week.

Jane Howard, Sheraden—You heard Don Bestor direct from Atlantic City over WJAS. It was not a record. He's scheduled again tonight at 5:45.

TODAY'S TID BIT:

An "open mike" at a downtown station brought listeners a sweet argument the other day on correct time. A zealous gentleman criticized the announcer for being a fraction off. The radio audience heard all.

BANQUET TO HONOR 30 WAR MOTHERS

SIDE WALKS of PITTSBURGH

by WILLIAM PFARR

What, incidentally, has become of Amos and Andy? Nobody mentions these two boys any more, although they are still on the radio. Their decline seems to be proceeding as rapidly as their ascent. Darrell Martin, this paper's radio editor, says they're going stale, that they dwell on one subject too long. We're still for them; when they're on the air we know it's between 7 and 7:15 o'clock.

If there are motorists, who, driving through Schenley Park, have been mystified by the presence of lamp-like objects which aren't lamps at all, we ask only the temporary loan of an ear. We are prepared to pierce the mystery. These lamp-like arrangements are sly traps designed to do death unto the Japanese beetle, foe of fruit. The state and the national governments have joined to war against the beetle and the local government has good-naturedly provided Schenley Park.

The results thus far are pretty discouraging, on the one hand, and fairly encouraging on the other. No beetles have been trapped, which is discouraging. But this lack of prisoners also indicates there are no beetles to be caught, which is encouraging.

The governments concerned have not asked our help but, we cannot resist requesting our admirers, immediately they sight a Japanese beetle, to do something about it. Only Japanese beetles will be accepted.

If a woman lights a cigaret in the lounge room of the Roosevelt Hotel, a bellhop will immediately but courteously hand her a card which invites her to refrain from smoking. The invitation is usually accepted indignantly.

Pittsburgh has never been the same for light entertainment since the Davis gave up two-a-day vaudeville. Ten years ago the average bill at the Davis contained twice as much talent, 10 times as many laughs and one-tenth as little boredom as the average revue of today. One bill might contain such names as Harry (Kid) Watson ("Skippin' de rope a t'ousand consecutive times"), Herb Williams and Eddie Cantor.

No dealer in bunk is George Murren, the boss of the county detectives. A few years ago, after the chief had solved a particularly trying murder, somebody asked him for the secret of his success. He answered in one work:

"Luck."

Speaking of murders, when Paul Jaworski was arrested at the Weckoski farm and brought to Pittsburgh, we sat on his lap for two hours in the county detectives' crowded car. That's our claim to fame. . . Later Jaworski, having escaped and been recaptured, lay in a Cleveland hospital when a sob-sister naively asked him:

"Mr. Jaworski, how many men have you killed?"

"Oh," answered Paul, tired of such questions, "26."

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif., July 17.

To the Editor of the Sun-Telegraph:

In the Hiram Johnson special session of the Senate, where Hiram is holding the Senate there while he investigates Dave Reed, he had Dave on the stand. Dave told him: "You can look at all the private communications, but it's a gentleman's agreement that you won't make use of the material."

Well, he blew up when he found he couldn't use them serially in even so obscure a periodical as the Congressional Record. Why he called Dave everything that a Pennsylvania Senator probably has to be.

To insinuate that a Senator should keep a secret was perhaps unparalleled in those legislative halls.

Yours,

WILL.

NEW BUS LINE OPPOSED BY RAILROAD

Edwards Motor Transit Co. Intrastate Service Not Needed, B. R. & P. Claims

Stiff opposition was encountered by the Edwards Motor Transit Company, before the Public Service Commission in their application for additional rights to operate an inter-state passenger service between Youngstown, O., and Clearfield, Pa., and DuBois, Kane, Warren and Buffalo.

Objection to extension of service was interposed by the Buffalo, Rochester and Pittsburgh Railroad Company on the ground that present railroad service was adequate to take care of the public needs.

ROUTE PLANNED

The specific extensions asked for would carry buses over Pennsylvania Highway route No. 65 between Sharon and Mercer County and Franklin in Venango County, following Highway Route 322. There also would be connections between Punxsutawney and Reynoldsville on Route 310, and between Barnesboro and Grampian in Clearfield County, over Route 219; between Franklin and Cranberry by way of Oil City with all the intrastate rights between all points on the above routes.

The application for a public convenience certificate also asks for permission to operate between DuBois, Clearfield County, and Kane, McKean County, over route No. 219; between DuBois, Ridgway and Weedville, Elk County, over route 255; between Weedville and St. Marys in Elk County by way of route 120, and between St. Marys and Ridgway.

BUFFALO CONNECTIONS

E. W. Edwards, manager of the Edwards Motor Transit Company admitted the certificate if granted would enable his company to make connections at DuBois, Kane and Warren for Buffalo.

Examiner W. E. Best, of Pittsburgh, heard the testimony and will make his recommendations to the commission.

CITY GETS FOUR NEW SWEEPERS

Four new Elgin motor sweepers will be put into service next week by the city street cleaning department. The machines are now at the municipal garage being conditioned. License plates for the machines will be received within a few days and they will be put into operation.

The machines, according to Supt. T. Lloyd Pillow, remove dirt from the streets with a minimum of dust. Water sprays keep the job sanitary.

Rich Rancher Asks Raquel To Become His Wife

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Raquel Rojos flees from her drab home in Hermosa, on the Mexican border; from her dissolute Spanish father; from her tragic, weak-willed American mother; from Bill Johnson, the man she had promised to marry. Without a ticket, she boards a train headed for Phoenix, Ariz. The conductor is unable to make change for the hundred-dollar bill that she offers for her fare, and he leaves her, his wits muddled by the radiance of her smile.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER II.

Raquel felt, rather than saw, that the conductor of the train meant to stop at her seat. She turned, began busying herself with the car window. She had decided, for no reason other than the sport of molding this man to her will, that she would "beat" her way to Phoenix.

"I guess it's stuck, lady," said the conductor. "Let me try it."

He moved into the seat, began wrestling with the obstreperous window. A faint pervasive perfume was in his nostrils. So unlike the odors of sweat and sheepskin and unwashed bodies to which he was accustomed that it distracted him, prevented his making any progress with the window.

"Perhaps we'd better let it go," said the girl. "It's cold out anyhow."

That brilliant, blinding smile. It gave him a queer feeling. As if he didn't want to be held by it, but couldn't help himself. He backed slowly out of the seat.

"Thanks just the same," said the girl.

The conductor found himself on the rear platform of the car.

"By jingo," he said. "I forgot to tell her I got the change for that hundred-spot. Oh, well"—dismissing his laxness with a shrug—"plenty of time before we git to Phoenix."

Inside the car Raquel again had wrapped herself in her cloak and her thoughts. The hundred dollars was hers. The conductor would return, but not for money. Her mind turned back to Hermosa.

Bill Johnson
Mother's Gossip Leads To Pledge

How had she come to pledge herself to Bill Johnson?

As she recalled, it all came about through a morsel of gossip retailed by her mother.

It was Sunday morning, and she was putting on her red silk dress—sleazy silk, the feel of which pleased her — getting ready for mass. She had wheedled enough silver from Pancho, her father, to buy a cheap yellow cotton rose to pin on her old sun-bufned red hat with the wide brim.

Lucy, her mother, bare toes protruding through a pair of dirty white slippers—they had been Raquel's communion slippers—was pounding up Pancho's bed tick, the only feather tick in the family. Between thuds she asked Raquel:

"You know that Bill Johnson?"

Raquel, preening before what remained of a broken mirror, murmured an answer that might have been yes and might have been no.

Her mother paused at her task, the better to accentuate the startling bit of information she was about to give.

"He's bought 10 acres out by Pueblo Crick. He's going to build a six-room wood house on it for Lily."

"A frame house!" she exclaimed. "Six rooms!"

"So Lily says. Johnson's aiming to marry Lily."

"That—woman! Patches of paint caked on her face and—and—straw hair? Why a blanket tent'd be good enough for her!" Raquel protested indignantly.

"You can't figure men." Her mother's voice sank to its tiresome monotone. "Johnson's a smart one too. He's the richest man in Hermosa. He could do better than Lily."

The richest man in Hermosa. And Lily, the woman who screeched silly love songs and got men to buy drinks in Keno Joe's place. A six-room frame house for her. Raquel decided that the yellow rose should go under the brim of the red hat, just behind her left ear. She must hurry or she would be late for mass. After mass she was going to meet Bill Johnson.

It had been several weeks before that Lily discovered that Johnson was not spending as much time as he pretended on his ranches along the Rio Grande. He was riding or walking with Raquel or sitting with her in front of her father's hut in the moonlight.

Mrs. Schlemmer, who bedded and boarded cattle men and itinerant travelers drifting into Hermosa, gave Lily the facts. Mrs. Schlemmer had them from her daughter, Anna.

There was a scene between Lily and Johnson then. A scene which echoed through the gambling dens and tequila parlors of Hermosa, and trickled out into the adobe kitchens. Johnson wore three deep scratches across his bluff red face.

"Looks like you'd been fighting wild-cats," Raquel remarked as she rode with him into the desert, straight toward the flaming cauldron of the setting sun.

Wants Raquel
Asks Her to Become His Wife

Johnson grunted. His eyes were sullen.

"Listen, baby," he said, suddenly reaching out and catching the reins of the bridle from her hand. "I want that you should—will you marry me, little Raquel?"

She feigned surprise. The swiftness of his surrender was, in truth, rather breath-taking.

"Why—why—Bill," she said, turning the glad light in her black eyes full upon him, pursing her red lips into a pretty "Not so's you could notice it." His voice rumbled up from his broad chest. "Anna Schlemmer's told her about . . . us. I cut Lily off my trail last night."

"But Bill," . . . working her slim soft hand under his big horny one where it lay on the reins . . . "if Lily . . ."

"Forget Lily. It's you I got to have, little Raquel." His voice was hoarse. She could feel his breath on her cheek. Stale tobacco. Strong drink. She swayed toward him.

He lifted her from her horse, placed her in front of him gingerly, on his saddle. She dropped her head against his thumping breast. Stale tobacco. Strong drink.

So deftly had she avoided his kiss that he did not realize it had been denied him. He stroked back the black satin of her hair. It snapped beneath his awkward touch. There was an electric quality in it.

Raquel was so astonished she dropped the yellow rose she was trying on her red hat.

Mullions in 'Cathedral' Windows Replaced

A score or more mullions—ornate pieces of stone that fit into the windows of Pitt's Cathedral of Learning—have been ripped out due to defective placement. Nearly all have been replaced, according to John Weber, dean of administration. Weber said:

"Our engineers found that the mullions were resting against other stone, instead of steel. They had to be taken out and washers placed between them to assure their weight resting on the steel."

Mr. Weber explained that the entire supply of stone for the huge building had been received, and distributed on the various floors. Speaking of progress being made, he said:

"The stone work has been going steadily. It will be up by Fall, I imagine."

EVERYWHERE THAT WARREN WENT—

PET DUCK FOLLOWING 15-MONTH-OLD WARREN VAN KIRK, JR., ALL ABOUT THE PLACE

BOY, 15 MONTHS, TRAINS DUCK

Fifteen-month-old Warren Van Kirk, Jr., of 2916 Perrysville avenue, who has set that particular section of his native Pittsburgh agog more than once by his juvenile exploits, has accepted a position that again puts him in the public eye.

He has become valet and trainer to a duck. Not to an ordinary duck, as the uninitiated might be prone to believe, but to one showing more than the average intelligence to which ducks and ducklings are ordinarily credited.

Nine weeks ago "Ducky Wucky," as Warren has appropriately had has pet named, was presented him by an ardent admirer. With a seriousness born of determination Warren has gone about the task of training this fowl to do his every bidding. Both are familiar sights on Perrysville avenue, with "Ducky Wucky" following him at a respectable pace up and down the thoroughfare. And when Warren wants to show off to any great extent, he leads "Ducky Wucky" on a silver threaded leash.

Pacing isn't the only exploit "Ducky Wucky" has up his wing of tricks. When he wants to and isn't too temperamental, he can do a Highland fling or what have you. The cameraman hypnotized him and he just wouldn't, that's all.

Warren, son of Mr. and Mrs. Warren Van Kirk, Sr., was the young chap who a few months ago caused a great furore in police circles of that section by ostensibly walking away with his father's watch. Peace was restored when the watch was found under his nursery crib.

Novena at St. Ann's To Start July 18

St. Ann's Syrian Catholic Church, 33 Fullerton street, will open the novena of its patron saint with an early mass at 7:30 on July 18. The ceremony will last until Sunday, July 27.

St. Ann's has a sacred relic in the form of a fragment of the bone from the arm of her patron. The Rev. Elias Basil will conduct the services. The principal speaker will be Father Richard Ackerman.

South Side Turners Vote to Dissolve

The South Side Turners Association, after 48 years' operation, has voted to dissolve, according to a petition on file today in Common Pleas Court, asking that its charter be revoked. The petition was signed by William T. Seabright, president, and F. J. Rode, secretary.

Policemen Show Fire Fighting Ability

In addition to being good traffic officers, policemen on duty in the Liberty Tubes must also know the duties of a fireman. To prepare the seven policemen for an emergency, should a fire be started in the tubes, P. J. Adams, superintendent of the tunnels, gave the men a fire test.

Twenty gallons of gasoline were poured into Secane street opposite the tunnel ventilating plant. Within less than a minute after the fluid had been fired, the officers, armed with anti-gasoline fluid, had the flames under control.

FIRE DESTROYS OLD BREWERY

Boys were blamed today for the fire which yesterday afternoon swept the plant of the old Allegheny Brewing Company, 833 Birkhoff street, North Side. I. Hahn, of Sewickley, owner of Hahn's Dry Cleaning Company, said that his concern leases the old building and that as late as yesterday morning he had requested police to stop boys playing in the building.

The structure was virtually destroyed by the flames which spread rapidly through the three-story brick structure. Three North Side fire companies rushed to fight the blaze. Traffic was tied up for more than an hour.

Wilkinsburg Holdup Nets Pair $144

G. W. Hunt, of 1123 Wallace avenue, Wilkinsburg, reported to police that two Negroes held him up at Frankstown and Paulson avenues early today and robbed him of $144.

DISCHARGE TWO OVER GAMING

John Freshman, 31, 2708 Center avenue, alleged operator of a paddle wheel at a carnival at Frankstown and Hamilton avenues, and John Petsko, 38, 142 South Negley avenue, were discharged at a hearing this morning before Magistrate Charles Papale in East End Police Court.

Freshman and Petsko were arrested last night during an argument in which Petsko is said to have claimed he had spent $200 on the wheel without any returns.

At the hearing this morning Petsko had nothing to say about the money and both he and Freshman were discharged.

Three Auto Crash Victims Sue Dentist

Dr. J. P. Clancy, dentist, at 4030 Penn avenue, was made defendant in three damage suits, totaling $30,000, on file today in Common Pleas Court. The suits were brought by Mrs. Virginia Tedesco and her two minor sons, Anthony and Andrew, for $10,000 each. They allege their automobile was upset by the dentist's car July 22, in Frankstown road, Penn township, causing injuries to all of them.

Ball Game Features Shoe Men's Picnic

A baseball game, novelty prizes and a Dutch lunch are features of the annual stag picnic of the Pittsburgh Shoe Retailers' and Shoe Travelers' Association, being held today at Turner's Grove, Perrysville. Winner of the ball game, in which teams composed of shoe retailers on one side and travelers on the other, will be presented a silver loving cup. William Kuhl is general chairman.

Forbes Road Memorial Stamp Asked of U. S.

United States postal authorities have been asked to issue a special stamp commemorating the old Forbes road between Bedford and Pittsburgh which was followed by Gen. John Forbes in his victorious expedition against Fort Duquesne.

Mrs. Flora S. Black, of Somerset, chairman of the committee engaged in marking the Forbes road, who is sponsoring the movement for the new stamp, states that she has received an encouraging letter from Senator David A. Reed, who believes that the Postoffice Department will grant her request.

It has been proposed to design a 2-cent stamp bearing an illustration of the Block House at the Point, and to place it in circulation early in autumn. The "victory" tablet, one of a series used in marking the course of the pioneer road, will be erected at the Block House. Arrangements for the Block House tablet are being made by a committee of the Fort Pitt Society, Daughters of the American Revolution.

EACH TO GET WREATH FOR SON'S GRAVE

Tribute Arranged for Eve Of Departure for France By Pittsburgh Contingent

Thirty Gold Star Mothers, whose sons fought with the Eightieth Division during the World War, will be honor guests at a banquet tonight at Webster Hall, sponsored by Pennsylvania Post, No. 1, Eightieth Division Auxiliary, and Pittsburgh Chapter World War Mothers.

The dinner will be a tribute to the mothers on the eve of their departure as guests of the government, to visit the graves of sons in French cemeteries.

WILL RECEIVE WREATHS

Each mother will receive a floral wreath bearing the divisional insigna. These wreaths will be placed on the graves upon arrival in France.

Speakers will include former Councilman James F. Malone, Jerry Maddin, of Gen. Lloyd M. Brett Post, Eightieth Division Association and Dr. H. R. Brown, of the U. S. Veterans' Hospital, Aspinwall.

Seven widows of service men who died in action during the World War will accompany Pittsburgh and Allegheny County Gold Star Mothers to American cemeteries in France next week as guests of the government.

Although the husbands of several more still lie in cemeteries overseas, only those women who have never remarried are permitted to make the tour, War Department regulations stipulate.

ANOTHER GROUP LATER

A second group of the mothers and widows will sail for other cemeteries in August, but to date the official list has not been made public.

Widows include:

Mrs. William Brotherton, of 337 Hawkins avenue, widow of Pvt. Ernest E. Brotherton, Battery B, 315 Field Artillery.

Mrs. Marie Herbert, Wilkinsburg, widow of Sergt. Frank D. Herbert, Company C, 111th Inf.

Mrs. Josephine H. Maas, 218 First street, Heidelberg, widow of Pvt. Alfred N. Maas, Company G, 319th Inf.

Mrs. Emma Jane Downer, of 907 East Braddock avenue, Homewood, widow of Sergt. Frank Downer, Machine Gun Company, 110th Inf.

Mrs. Edith L. Murphy, of 5813 Jordan way, widow of Pvt. Edward R. Murphy, Company I, 110th Inf.

All of these buried in Meuse-Argonne Cemetery.

Mrs. Laura B. Keith, of 1400 Slate avenue, Coraopolis, widow of Chaplain Michael Wilson Keith, 111th Inf., buried in Suresnes Cemetery.

SHARE IN GRIEF

In two instances widows and mothers of soldier dead will be partners in mourning on the pilgrimage.

Mrs. Josephine Maas will accompany her husband's mother Mrs. Philomene Maas, of Heidelberg, on the trip, July 26, from New York on the S. S. Republic to Meuse-Argonne Cemetery, where Pvt. Alfred N. Maas is interred.

Mrs. Marie Herbert will journey with her mother-in-law, Mrs Carrie V. Herbert, of Wilkinsburg on the same ship to visit the grave of Sergt. Frank D. Herbert.

The first contingent of four mothers is scheduled to leave

'TIN CAN' GOLF SOHO PRIDE

The Soho Country and Golf Club has at last developed into reality.

In a vacant lot in the 2200 block, Fifth avenue, stands the latest monument to Young America's aggressiveness—a six-hole tin can golf course, water hazards, sand traps and all.

But three days old, the "course" has assumed the aspect of a community center, with children large and small, taking part in competition for the district "champeen." Age is no limit.

Rumors of such a club started when miniature courses made there bid for public approval. Joe Bernotas, potential Bobby Jones of Soho, made it a reality. Armed with nearly a ton of whitewashed bricks, Joe bordered the lot and laid the links. Tin cans serve as cups. Dishpans, tin sheeting and planks are hazards. Handmade sand mounds add further difficulties.

Par according to Joe is 36. Yesterday he played in the "champeen" tournament and made a 53, beating his nearest rival by one stroke. Jimmy Long, 3, is his caddy.

High class golfing isn't confined to males. Catherine Joyce, 11, is Joe's chief rival. She made a hole in two—three strokes under her nearest boy rival.

David Stein, just across the avenue, is supply man. He has stocked an diminitive putters, brassies and drivers. "Club" members purchase these for five cents each. The pros are Patrick O'Toole and J. Bommers.

Soho business men are contributing to a pool for clubs and balls, and they're circulating a petition for lights, for play at night.

'Y' RULED FREE OF TAXATION

The downtown Y. M. C. A. is a charitable institution and is therefore wholly exempt from taxation, according to an opinion handed down in Common Pleas Court by Judge A. B. Reid, deciding a matter which has been in controversy for five years.

Judge Reid, in his opinion deciding the appeal of the Y. M. C. A. from the assessment of taxes for 1925, says that, although the institution does conduct certain revenue-paying departments, including dormitories, cafeteria, soda grill, billiard room and tailor shop, in its 18-story building at Wood street and Third avenue, the operation always results in a deficit, which is made up by public subscription. It is a public charity, says the judge, and wholly exempt from taxation on that account. Although the judge says the building could be divided for purposes of taxation, he makes no further comment on that point.

The building was assessed at $745,000 and the land at $412,000, a total of $1,157,000.

BASEMENT RUM PLANT RAIDED

Raiding a dwelling at 3159 Ewart drive, prohibition agents reported finding a whisky-cutting plant in the basement of the place.

Seizure of 210 gallons of alcohol, 100 gallons of whisky, three sacks of ale and seven bottles of cognac resulted in the arrest of Nathan Karnosky, 50, according to the agents. Karnosky denied ownership, saying he rented the cellar to a man who resided in Fifth avenue, the raiders reported.

Three men whose homes agents raided were released on their own recognizance. They were Frank Fusaro, 24, of 415 Bigham street, Mt. Washington; George Yakim, 40, of 131 Prospect street, Turtle Creek, and Joseph Riggio, 42, of 4069 Liberty avenue, agents said.

TREE PERCHERS STILL ALOFT

A cold, foggy dawn failed to awaken Brushton's tree-sitters today after their fortieth hour had passed, but later they awoke, and as the day waned, they were in fine spirits. Ruth Gravely, 631 Rockies street, her brothers' "refueling" agent, reported that they ate a hearty breakfast consisting of rolled oats, bacon and eggs and milk. The four boys, James, Robert and Lawrence Gravely, and their cousin, Samuel King, seem more cheerful now than ever before and are confident of breaking the existing record.

The four boys are roosting in two trees in a vacant lot near their homes.

Morale of the four tree-sitters was shaken last night, the sister reported, when they were unable to get a good view of an Italian fireworks display in the Pranksstown road. Descent from their perch was under advisement, but they finally decided against coming down. All are Negroes.

NARCOTIC MEMORIAL TO PORTER PROPOSED

Vote Recount Board Uncovers Errors in Sixth Ward

PLAN TRIBUTE FOR WAR ON DOPE EVIL

Senate Given Measure to Recognize Great Work Of Pittsburgh Statesman

By KENNETH CLARK
Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, July 17.—A move whereby a grateful government would perpetuate the memory of the late Representative Porter of Pennsylvania for his services in fighting the narcotic menace has been launched by Senator Smoot (Rep.), of Utah.

Under a resolution which Smoot will introduce in the Senate today the Federal narcotic farm which the government is building near Lexington, Ky., would be known officially as "the Stephen G. Porter Institute."

FOUGHT DOPE EVIL

Representative Porter, who died last month, was long recognized as the leading narcotic expert in Congress. Throughout his long service in the House he sponsored international movements and domestic legislation to rid the world of the dope evil.

His last achievement was the enactment of the bill, sponsored by the Hearst newspapers, to create an independent Bureau of Narcotics. The bureau was organized on July 1.

It was Mr. Porter's bill, approved in January, 1929, which authorized two Federal narcotic farms for the rehabilitation of Federal prisoners who are addicted to drugs. The farms inaugurate a new method of helping to restore victims of dope. The rehabilitation work will be under the direction of physicians of the Public Health Service. No longer will addicts be thrown helplessly into prison with little opportunity to be cured of their habit.

PROVIDE TWO FARMS

At the last session Congress appropriated the money to buy a 1,200-acre site near Lexington for the first farm. The second farm is to be located in the Southwest. Actual construction work on both farms is expected to begin early next spring.

Dr. Walter L. Treadway, an assistant surgeon general of the Public Health Service, is director of the farms.

Senator Smoot, as chairman of the Finance Committee, handled the farm bill in the Senate. He also co-operated closely with Mr. Porter in other narcotic legislation. With Mr. Porter dead, the leadership of the congressional forces fighting the dope evil fell to Senator Smoot.

Senator Watson, of Indiana, Republican Senate leader, and other government officials indorsed the Smoot resolution.

The Camera Question Box

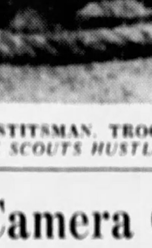
Today's question:—Ultra-drys in Congress have blocked a move to use the word "whisky" in a memorial to George Washington for suppressing the famous Whisky Insurrection. What do you think of the move?

Dick Powell

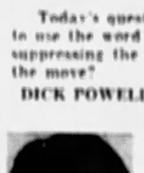
DICK POWELL, master of ceremonies, Pittsburgh:—I don't think the word should be eliminated. The thing for which the memorial is being erected took place in the days when it was heard frequently and the memorial would hardly be appropriate without it.

SAMUEL G. WAGNER, musician, Pittsburgh:

There should be no objection to the use of the word at all. The Eighteenth Amendment wasn't in existence at that time and there wasn't anything unlawful about the use of whisky.



S. G. Wagner



Miss Ward

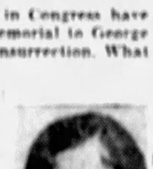
MISS MADELEINE WARD, singer, East End:—I think it's carrying things too far to rule out the word. It's harmless and is quite in its right place in the memorial. Why should it be omitted?

Miss Perry

BLANCHE PERCY, dancer, East Liberty:—Such an act is ridiculous. The mere use of the word isn't going to hurt anything and this procedure is carrying things to extremes.

JERRY MAYHALL, production manager, Sewickley:—Well if they keep that attitude these ultra drys will have to get busy and rewrite a lot of history, because in the days when whisky wasn't beyond the law the word appeared more than often.

Jerry Mayhall



Miss Walmsley

MISS HAZEL WALMSLEY, artist, Squirrel Hill:—It seems most unreasonable to carry out that plan. I can't see where leaving one word out of a memorial is going to get the dry party any place.

REPORTS FILED FOR THREE DISTRICTS

Irregular Markings Found On Many Ballots; Some Held for More Attention

The Recount Board appointed by President Judge James R. Macfarlane, of Common Pleas Court, to check allegations of fraud in specific ballots cast in the recent primary election, found only minor errors in the election board's returns in three districts of the Sixth Ward, but numerous irregular markings were observed, according to a report filed yesterday with Prothonotary John Vogt.

In the Third district, the greatest variation in figures of the election board from the tally of the Recount Board was three votes for major office candidates. In the Fourth district it was two votes for major office candidates and 34 for state committee candidates.

OTHER VARIATIONS

In the Fifth, it was five for major office candidates, six for state senatorial candidates, 10 for state representatives and nine for state committee candidates.

In the Third district, 10 ballots were segregated for further attention, if desired by the court, because the marks on all ballots were not made by the same person; eight, because marks were made by different colors of lead pencils and 10 for phantom crosses.

Fifty-seven ballots were segregated in the Fourth district because the marks for all candidates were not made by the same person; six because marks were made by different colored pencils, and three for phantom crosses.

BALLOT DIFFERENCE SMALL

Fourteen were segregated in the Fifth district because marks were made by different persons; 79 because marks were made by different colored pencils and 64 for phantom crosses.

The greatest difference in any district between the number of ballots in the box and the names on the voters' list was three.

House Party Planned for Women

Very suddenly there are ever so many things to tell you of that I wonder which you will be interested in hearing first. Everyone who is going away is planning things to do wherever he goes. If it's a summer home or cottage, there will always be a house party and if it's a resort there will be luncheons and dances and everything imaginable because the resorts attract so many Pittsburgh people there really is a tiny colony of them.

And many people are stopping several days or perhaps a week in one place and then going on to the next and just keep traveling the whole summer long. Most folks though prefer staying in one place, returning home for a week or two in the middle of the season and then going back again.

House Party

Mrs. Caleb C. Lee of North Negley avenue is leaving for Hollidaysburg on Tuesday and with her are going a party including Mrs. William H. Crump, Miss Lou Hay, Mrs. A. E. Wainwright, Mrs. John Davis and her sister, Kate Phillips, and Mrs. Robert Sarris. They will stay a week at a cottage in the mountains there.

And a week from this Friday Mrs. Eugene Lawrence Messler of Forbes street leaves for Watch Hill, R. I., where she will be the guest of her cousin, Mrs. William B. Trainer. And accompanying Mrs. Messler will be Mrs. James Verner Scaife. They will be at the popular resort for several weeks.

The junior William Howard Nimicks and their sons, William Howard Nimick III and Herman Griffin Nimick, of South Dallas avenue, are all in Bay Head, N. J., where there is quite a colony of Pittsburgh people.

LATEST MODE IN SLEEVES PRESENTED BY STYLISTS

—Sketched in Paris—

Paris Bureau, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, July 17.—The sleeve now goes two-thirds of the way to meet with most successful results. This of course means gloves, otherwise the effect would appear rather the reverse of smart. Especially with plain or unbelished frocks much attention is given to the sleeve in order to achieve a degree of originality and interest, and since this type of frock is now firmly entrenched in the mode, couturiers are offering sleeves of various types and cut. Ardanse is one designer who has had success with the loose, flowing sleeve and with sleeves that are elaborately ornamented in marked contrast to the rest of the frock, which is generally of a sheer material. Then too, the demure puff sleeve had its day and even its evening. And next season it would seem that the sleeve that terminates between the elbow and the wrist is to be responsible for an increase of gloves in our glove boxes. And so the glove goes hand-in-hand with fashion in this era of formality and femininity.

WE ARE ABLE to send you a sketch of Worth's very latest model, a model that you will readily see is due for a good deal of popularity and duplication. It is the type of frock that suits almost everybody and is appropriate for almost any daylight function. The model sketched is of biscuit colored crepe de chine of very heavy quality. The long scarf and the cuffs are lined with bois-de-rose crepe. Worth favors the irregular hemline in this instance using a pointed drapery at the center front. The irregular line of the empiecements in the bodice and upper part of the skirt is interesting and highly original. Dark brown suede gloves complete the three-quarter sleeve.

THE OTHER SKETCH is of a highly successful model from Irene Dana, and has proven one of the gems of her summer collection. It is of heavy white tussor with touches of color in the printed blue and white scarf and blue leather belt. Both scarf and bolero are removable.

She thought:
"I'd gladly go to a movie with you if you weren't so careless about 'B.O.'"
Yet, to be polite,
She said:
"Thanks, but the hot sun gave me a headache. I'm going to bed early."

Another lonesome vacation ... was 'B.O.' to blame?

(Body Odor)

PEOPLE had been friendly enough at first—invited him to go on picnics, walks and rides. But not any more! Even his own invitations were politely turned down now. That's what always happened—every year. He couldn't understand it.

Then, returning to the city on a crowded train, he overheard something. His own name and then—"B.O." And all at once—he knew! Realized why others left him out of things, kept away from him. For "B.O." is the polite term for a condition people dislike even to mention—body odor . . . Now he has adopted a simple safeguard against this fault that kept him unpopular. Next year won't see another vacation ruined by "B.O."

"B.O." weather—beware!

Hot sultry days like these make us perspire more freely—increase the danger of "B.O." We quickly become used to this ever-present odor, seldom notice it in ourselves—only in others.

Because it is so easy to offend and not know it, take this simple precaution. Switch to Lifebuoy. Then you're safe. For Lifebuoy, even in hardest water, gives a flood of rich, creamy, antiseptic lather that penetrates pores—removes all odor—leaves you gloriously clean and fresh. Its pleasant, extra-clean scent that vanishes as you rinse—tells you Lifebuoy purifies.

Keeps complexions at their loveliest

What a friend Lifebuoy is to the complexion! Millions of women know this. Its bland, searching lather deep-cleanses pores—gently frees them of clogged impurities. Then watch dull skins freshen—healthy, radiant beauty return. Adopt Lifebuoy today.

Barrymore to Alternate In Drama, Comedy Hereafter

By HARRISON CARROLL.

(Copyright, 1930, Premier Syndicate.)

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., July 17.

To keep his public from tiring of costume plays and tense dramatic stories, Warner Bros. are planning a new schedule for John Barrymore.

Prompted by the favorable comment and success of "The Man From Bankeleys" they plan in the future to alternate between comedy and drama for the star. This causes "Hamlet" supposedly his next story, to be shelved temporarily, and a search for a comedy vehicle is being made to take its place.

When a story is selected, Al Greene, who directed "The Man From Bankeleys" will receive the assignment. After the comedy the Shakespearean play will go into production.

Dolores Costello

Meanwhile John and Dolores Costello Barrymore are giving little concern to future picture work. Together with Joseph Cawthorn and his wife Dolores Costello they are aboard the Barrymore yacht off the coast of Alaska on a six weeks' fishing expedition.

JUST IN CASE

They tell a funny story about Eddie Cantor at the out-of-town preview of "Whoopee."

Eddie was seated next to Florenz Ziegfeld and as the picture started to get under way nervously whispered to the producer: "Flo, if I grab your arm during this start getting 'The Follies' ready."

However, this will probably not come to pass as Cantor is scheduled to make another for United Artists as Sam Goldwyn is taking up his option. Aside from Cantor's efforts Sam must think "Whoopee" is well directed, as he presented Thornton Freeland with a $5,000 bonus check following the preview.

The letter "S" has always been a good luck omen for Jerome Kern. His musical success, starting with "Sally" and "Sunny" and finishing with his latest stage efforts, "Showboat" and "Sweet Adeline," have all clicked. Now he has completed his first screen musical story, "The Man From the Sky," and is superstitious about the title. So he has posted a $500 prize for any member of the Warner organization who can suggest one starting with an "S".

STARS ENTERTAIN

Several parties were held over the week-end by the various stars. An outstanding one was given by William Haines, who entertained 50 guests at his home in honor of Beatrice Lillie.

Bill outdid himself with his table decorations and must have had the local florist crazy fulfilling his order of 2,000 gardenias and 500 orchids. Gardenias were twined into long ropes while the orchids reposed in large bowls along the table.

Beatrice Lillie

Many of Hollywood's prominent stars were in attendance, among them were Bebe Daniels and Ben Lyons, Edmund Lowe and Lilyan Tashman, Colleen Moore, Carmen Pantages, May Sunday, Eileen Percy, John Gilbert and many others. John was alone as Ina Claire is in the north with a play.

SKIPPY'S NEW BOSS

Striving to get the children back into the theaters Paramount is sparing no effort in the assembling of the company that will make "Skippy."

Victor Schertzinger, who has been one of the mainstays of the directorial staff, is to handle the activities of Percy Crosby's cartoon character.

The director is in New York, where he has recently completed Buddy Rogers' latest musical comedy, "Heads Up." "Skippy" will be filmed in the Long Island studios, starting early in September. The boy to play the character has not been selected as yet and tests are being made in both Hollywood and New York for the right youngster.

Cedric Gibbons' beach home was the scene of another dinner party. The M. G. M. art director and Dolores Del Rio are being seen together constantly of late and the party was in her honor. This looks like a real romance, one with an engagement announcement in the near future.

The Harold Lloyd estate was the scene of a comic bathing costume party and parade.

AN ENDURANCE RACE

Victor MacLaglen has hit upon an idea which must be given credit for being different. The film star is attempting to enlist 49 men over 40 years of age to go into an endurance gambling scheme with him. Each will put up $1,000. The total will be placed in a trust fund and the last living contributor will get the $50,000.

Victor MacLaglen

When approached with the proposition El Brendel suggested that Vic try taking up subscriptions from hospital patients to avoid any risk.

Braying of Mules Gives Fire Alarm

HARRISBURG, July 17 (INS).—The braying of mules quartered in a barn on the farm of Harry Miller, near Greencastle, awoke him early today. He rolled over, but on second thought looked out the window and saw the barn afire.

Firemen were unable to save the structure. Livestock, including the mules, was saved.

MARGUERITE CHURCHILL is the heart interest in "Good Intentions," booked for Aldine screen Friday.

ADAPTATIONS OF STAGE PLAYS FILL MOVIE BILLBOARDS

Norma Shearer is starred by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer in the picturization of "Let Us Be Gay," from Rachel Crothers' stage play, the screen attraction at Loew's Penn starting tomorrow. Co-starring with Miss Shearer is Marie Dressler. The leading male role is played by Rod La Roque.

Ann Harding, who played opposite Ronald Colman in "Condemned," is seen at the Stanley today in her latest production, "Holiday," adapted to the screen from Philip Barry's drama. Edward Everett Horton, Mary Astor and Robert Ames support Miss Harding. On the Stanley stage Dick Powell will offer "Lanterns."

Grim realism remains at the Pitt Theater in "All Quiet on the Western Front," starting its eighth week. Louis Wolheim and Lewis Ayres are the keystones of this epic of war in and behind the German lines. The picture was directed by Lewis Milestone.

Edmund Lowe returns to the Aldine tomorrow in his latest starring vehicle, "Good Intentions," a drama of an international crook who meets the ghosts of his past along the road to romance and happiness. He is supported by Marguerite Churchill and Regis Toomey.

"Cheer Up and Smile," Fox movietone musical romance, opens Saturday at the Harris Theater. Dixie Lee, Arthur Lake and "Whispering" Jack Smith, radio entertainer, are in the cast. Victor Graff and Ralph Harrison present the stage show.

Alice White comes to the Enright tomorrow in a comedy-romance-drama, "Sweet Mama." Supporting her are David Manners, Kenneth Thomson and Lee Moran. On the stage "Buddy" Page, master of ceremonies, will present Chester Fredericks, Burns and Allen and Dorothy Bushey.

SHOW BOAT TO OFFER TYPICAL BILLS NEAR ASPINWALL

The Golden Rod, show boat, at Montrose Hotel landing, Aspinwall, beginning Monday, will open indefinitely.

The Golden Rod, the most palatial floating theater on the rivers, has been brought up from the South, where it has been playing during the winter and spring, and it will give the same show here as it did along the Mississippi from St. Paul to New Orleans. "Tilty Ann" is to be the opening bill.

Patrons are guaranteed a typical river show presented by a typical river company. The actors on these show boats are most versatile. There is nothing unusual about the hero of the play doing a buck-and-wing in the vaudeville between the acts, nor in the trap-drummer in the orchestra donning overalls to paint the deck in the afternoon. Capt. J. W. Menke, the owner and manager, has trained the ship's company to meet all emergencies and holds himself in readiness to do the same.

Only evening shows will be given. The boat will be open at 7:30 p. m., and the curtain will rise at 8:45. There is parking space on Montrose Hotel landing for several hundred cars.

Morning Mouth

Everybody has it... Astring-o-sol corrects it

You can't help waking up with Morning Mouth . . . but you don't have to go thru the day with it!

EVERYBODY wakes up with Morning Mouth—that stale, dry, disagreeable taste which follows sleep. But nobody has to go through the day with it—when it is so easy to correct with Astring-o-sol.

Make this delightful half-minute trial when you get up tomorrow morning: Shake a few dashes of Astring-o-sol into a quarter-glass of water. Then gargle and swish the tingling liquid through your teeth. Feel the magic change this simple and delightful Astring-o-sol treatment makes.

That peculiar Morning-Mouth taste will vanish. Throat and mouth tissues will be cooled, refreshed, stimulated, and waked up. Your breath will be purified. All those tiny crevices will be cleansed. For Astring-o-sol penetrates such crevices—leaves a pleasant, tangy after-taste—and gives you that delightful feeling of cleanness and fitness.

Astring-o-sol's remarkable effectiveness as a mouth wash and throat gargle is due to its concentration, which makes it *1. Do More—you can use it in any strength required; 2. Cost Less to Use—a 4-ounce bottle makes 12 full pints of refreshing mouth wash; 3. Taste Better—you can dilute it to suit your personal taste.

Moreover, Astring-o-sol is an Antiseptic and Astringent. It is the arch enemy of those tiny germs that cause so much illness. Dentists everywhere use and prescribe it.

Try a bottle today and you will wonder how you ever got along without it.

TELL IT TO SALLY

By SALLY MARTIN

Aren't Good Habits the Easiest to Acquire?

Remember Ma Gingler who complained bitterly because Elsa and Gina, her two young lady daughters, never picked up their own clothes, and wouldn't even get up in time to eat more than half a breakfast before they rushed off to work?

And remember how Missis S. Watson bawled us out for telling her to make 'em snap out of it . . . and told us how she doted on picking up after her girls?

Well, here's Floss with some red hot remarks on the subject. Whose side is she on? Tune in on this and see. It's good.

Dear Sally:

Can I put my nail in my thumb 'pick up after the kids was I to like to tell both Ma Gingler and Missis Watson a few of my ideas about?

Am I a Ma? I'm one of the girls. I'm just 21 now. And I work. And go to dances at nights too. And has anyone ever picked up after me? No siree! I always have picked up after myself ever since I can remember.

"Did I like it?" I'll say I didn't. I thought it was terrible. But it didn't do a bit of good to kick. Of course Mother did things for me that I wouldn't have time to do when I was working. She mended and washed for me and of course did the cooking mostly. But I sometimes helped about those things too. Because mother said I had to get into the habit of doing them and knowing how to do them. That it would make life easier for me in the long run. Well, I grumbled and kicked and thought I was picked on.

"But now you just don't know how glad I am that she made me do them. Because I've met the one and only man now, and I'm so proud because when we're married I'll know how to do things. Because I've never learned to shirk . . . to leave things strewed around . . . to put things off.

"In other words I've learned good habits. And when I see some of my friends struggling to do the things that have just got to be part of my natural reactions I'm sorry for them. It's heaps harder to learn things and unlearn them after you've grown up, and all your habits are set. Don't you think so? I do.

"In fact I think that these mothers who pick up after their kids and make things easy for them are just storing up a lot of trouble for them . . . they aren't really making life easier for those kids at all. They're making it harder. The time to climb into your harness and find out what it's all about is while you're still a youngster and learning how to live.

Believe me when I have any kids I'm going to do just like my mother did. I'm not going to expect too much of them but I'm going to see that they don't grow up ignorant.

I've learned to take care of my money and myself and my Bob and I make a whiz and a game of working together when we're married. I'll say we will. We've got the habit. And the thought that I'll be able to be a really efficient wife makes me awfully happy. I can see now where my mother did me the biggest favor she could ever have done me when she taught me to go ahead and get things done myself and not loll around waiting for someone else to do them for me.

So you tell these mothers to snap out of it before it's too late and give those girls of theirs habits and knowledge and experience to work with so that when they do have to go out on their own they won't have such a terribly hard time getting going. You know that what you learn when you're a kid just gets to be a part of you and it's no picnic trying to make yourself over and learn a lot of hard new tricks after you're grown up.

I say God bless my mother for making me step lively sometimes when I didn't want to! I love her for it even if I did do a good deal of crabbing now and then while she was doing it. I think life's just game now. But I do hate to see some of the people I see blundering painfully around working twice as hard as I do because they don't know the things she made me learn.

Don't you think I'm right? I'm sure I am. Of course I don't believe in making kids do things that are too hard. Kids have to play too. But they've got to be grown up some time. Why handicap 'em by not teaching them how to act when they are grown up?

FLOSS.

I'm with you a million! There isn't a more pathetic creature in the world than a full-grown human who doesn't know how to take care of himself or herself. Of one who'll get the dog-eye from the rest of the world more quickly.

This idea that Bill and Molly can learn all that when the time comes to use it is a lot of eye wash! And you're a lucky girl!

The man who steals a chicken gets a jail sentence, but the chicken who steals a man sometimes gets a wedding ring.

The modern marriage differs from the old-fashioned marriage chiefly in the fact that there are two brands of cigarets and two pay-envelopes in the house.

Narrying a sad-widow is taking a chance on playing second fiddle to a beautiful memory, but, when you marry a glass widow you find it easy to shine by comparison with a bitter disappointment!

One divorce used to get a woman into the limelight; but now it takes at least three ex-husbands to give her any distinction as a great matrimonial failure.

King Solomon, the wise, is dead, but the world is still full of men who have not the slightest doubt that they can string along a few hundred women without getting their wives crossed.

In spite of golf vibrators and prohibition, a lot of men still get most of their heavy exercise jiggling the cocktail shaker.

No matter how smooth or beautiful or serene any human being's disposition may be there are always little cross sections in it where "No Trespassing" signs should be erected.

Some women study hard for an L. L. D.—and others just lay down the law around the house and get away with it.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Bouquets Not the Best Man's Responsibility

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

A friend of mine is to be a best man at a wedding soon and he is in doubt as to whether he is supposed to buy the bridesmaid's bouquet. Will you please let me know? M. W.

He is not supposed to buy the bouquet of any of the bridal attendants. The bouquets of the bridal attendants are provided, usually, by the parents of the bride. Or sometimes if he requests the honor, by the groom. Never by the best man.

A Most Informal Type of Invitation

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

When telephoning guests for a wedding reception, how much time must intervene between the invitation and the reception? MRS. J.

Such a form of invitation would, of course presuppose a gathering and therefore the invitation would probably not be given until about two weeks before the date set for the ceremony. Even 10 days might be enough.

The Engagement Ring a Symbol

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

For more than a year I have been wearing an engagement ring and just recently my fiance was killed. Now is it perfectly proper to keep on wearing the ring?

R. M.

This depends entirely on your personal reaction, my dear girl. If you feel that this ring is the symbol of your spiritual marriage and you wish to wear it, there is no reason in the world why you shouldn't. I am sure that the world of your friends will understand just what you choose to do in this sorrowful circumstance, so do what eases your spirit most.

Shades of Ink

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

1. When writing a business letter what color ink should be used?

2. When writing a friendly letter what color ink should be used? READER.

1. Black (or possibly dark blue). But black is best.

2. The same answer as for question one.

Don't Worry Over the Drink Sodden Discarded One, Advises Fay King

IF YOU DON'T MARRY ME, SALLY, I'LL DRINK MYSELF TO DEATH!
HELL DRINK HIMSELF TO DEATH ANYWAY!
THE TRUTH IS HE LOVES HIS LIQUOR AND SHE'S JUST HIS ALIBI BABY!
I TOOK TO DRINK ON ACCOUNT OF A DAME!
FAT MING

By FAY KING.

No need to get a cramp in your conscience because the fellow you refused to marry is drowning himself in drink.

He probably would have taken to drink even if you had married him.

I have observed that kind is really more pleased when you refuse him because then you become an alibi baby, and he likes nothing better than to have someone to blame for his failure.

The fellow you have more reason to feel sorry about is the one you refused and who marched off and made good without you.

This is the kind that a girl can blame her stupidity in not recognizing his true worth and bright future when he loved her and asked her to marry.

Love's Reawakening

Continuation of Love's Awakening

By ADELE GARRISON

Mrs. Ticer Joins the 'Greens Expedition'

Mrs. Ticer's query concerning Mary unconsciously accused and convicted me of neglectful unobservance of my husband's lovely young niece. After deducting a large percentage for Mrs. Ticer's known pessimism I found ample reason for worry in her strictures upon Mary's appearance. She had not seen the girl since our departure for the city, for while Mary had run out to see her grandmother for an occasional week-end she had spent all her limited time at the farmhouse. Thus this good neighbor would be able to contrast the young girl's appearance in the autumn with her present looks without being hampered by seeing her in the interval.

It was imperative I knew that I answer my neighbor's good-hearted query with a definite affirmative or negative, and as I had no intention of discussing Mary's emotional woes with her I made my answer a shocked agreement.

"Oh! I am afraid she is ill, and I haven't noticed it!" I exclaimed. "You see, we've been seeing her every day, and . . ."

"Of course you couldn't see the change in her like I would, who haven't set eyes on her for weeks," Mrs. Ticer replied. Then having gratified her naively dramatic sub-consciousness she hedged soothingly.

"Maybe it's only because she's extra tired, and she'll be all right when she gets rested up out here. I always do say the air here would bring back a dead man."

She laughed comfortably and turned as her lanky husband, Sam, slouched through the door.

"I'll go and get Junior some of my ginger cookies while you talk to Sam," she said. "Did you say you was goin' to take a lunch to the woods for the Christmas greens?"

"Yes, and your cookies will make the day perfect for Junior," I told her.

"I know he likes 'em," she admitted, and bustled off while her husband looked at me with tranquil expectation.

"Mother said you wanted to see me about some work," he said at last, and I hurriedly gave him an outline of the work I wanted done emphasizing the fact that if it were not completed by Christmas my plans for the children's holiday would be spoiled. He listened quietly, and his face gave no indication that he was even interested in the plan. But when I had finished he stretched out his hand for the lists I had made and looked them over.

"Regular architect, you be, Miss Graham," he said, looking up when he had finished and I saw that his eyes, though they held amusement, were approving as well. "An' these will be all I'll need. You kin jes' go home an' not worry nothin' more. I'll get the materials and I'll get the man, and I'll have the work all done two days before Christmas."

There was a ring of sincerity in his voice which set all my apprehensions at rest. I had not been mistaken when I had told Dicky that the creative opportunity and the responsibility of Junior's Christmas celebration would effectually triumph over Sam Ticer's lethargy and indolence.

"I am sure of that, Mr. Ticer," I said rising, "and I shall leave it all in your hands. The only thing which troubles me now is how to keep the boys away from you while the work is going on."

"Don't need to keep 'em away," he returned surprisingly. "How many of 'em are they, and how old are they?"

"Roderick is a year older than Junior, while the two older boys are about 15 and 13."

"They can all help if they'll mind," he said, "and it will keep 'em out of mischief, and be a good joke on 'em when they find out they've been fixing up their own Christmas. Look-it!" as he caught my doubtful glance, "until right up to the last you can't tell what I'm fixing up down there. I'll tell 'em you're fixing up another room for books, and that's no lie, for you've planned bookshelves here for some of Junior's books. No, you jest let me have the boys."

"I'll be glad to, Mr. Ticer," I said. The words came fervently, for I felt that he had gone far toward solving a perplexing problem for me. The Ticer family, father, mother and son, have a distinct affinity for children, and Junior is never so joyous as when he is with them.

"Yes, I'll bet you'll be glad to git 'em off your hands part of the time," he said with a grin, and then I gave him my father's check for initial expenses.

Father insisted upon that when I told him of my plans, and went in search of Mrs. Ticer.

I found her with Mary and the boys and Jerry, all munching her ginger cookies, and when I hurried my party toward the car a wistful look came into her eyes that I understood. She is a gypsy at heart, this good neighbor of mine.

"We'll wait for you," I told her smiling. "I know your husband's going to town right away and he and Jerry will be over at the farmhouse at work all day. I'll step and tell Katie to give them dinner, and do you come with us."

She considered a minute, twiddling her apron between her strong brown fingers.

"I believe I will," she said at last. "I've got The Larches all in perfect order if I do say it as shouldn't. It's all ready for that Miss Brixton to step into, groceries you sent over all arranged and everything. And my own work can wait. I'll just spread to Sam a minute."

Before we left him about dinner at the farmhouse, I ventured, and she nodded, sharing my knowledge that if Sam Ticer were sure of a good dinner it did not matter to him where he ate it. Five minutes later we were on our way to the woods with Mary's pallor and haunted eyes the only shadow upon our expedition. And the key to her dolor I meant to find if possible before we returned from the woods.

Balm

I placed you on a pretty pedestal,
I sang your praises all around the town,
If ever any youngster took a fall
That lad was I—I surely played the clown.
It seemed to me that you stood all alone,
A paragon of charm and loveliness,
I merely cared to worship at your throne,
And revel in the lure of each caress.

Yet, over night your reign came to an end,
The spell was broken and the romance through,
And you are now a casual little friend
I use to fill a fleeting hour or two;

No matter what you do—you leave me cold,
Thank God, I'm getting wise—or getting old!

Cute Stuff

The Allan Dwans of Hollywood according to Louella Parsons have had a difficult time of it shooing off uninvited guests to their parties. The Dwans tried every trick but with no good results. They urged their newspaper columning friends to insert paragraphs warning pests that they would be snubbed if they crashed their home but the idea didn't click.

They finally thought of a successful ruse which also served as a new name for their shack. They have posted a neat sign on the gate which reads "Dwan Away."

Crippled for Life

It is E. E. Paramore, Jr.'s note that a vaudeville actor was limping along on crutches, suffering from a broken toe.

"How come?" asked Paramore.

"I got it," was the bitter retort, "kicking a booking agent in the heart."

Flip Quip

They were speaking of a certain producer of a certain revue which shall remain nameless because the gendarmes raided it recently. At any rate a certain wisenheimer said that the producer's alleged brain probably consisted of a lot of torn French postcards.

Dawgonnit!

You can't be the life of the party anymore around New York. That is if your specialty is relating smoking-car tales.

Because your listeners have already seen Earl Carroll's revue.

Unhappy Ending

At a Canadian track recently the husband of an adored celebrity wagered a goodly sum on a steed bearing his wife's name. The horse surprised its backers by coming in first and paying a sweet price, seven to one.

The horse never won a race before the husband making the wager purely for sentimental reasons.

One lad, however, who went broke backing the horse for the past two years, left the track shaking his head.

He was the lad who christened the horse—when he was romantic.

As If You Didn't Know

Texas Guinan, the Woman Nobody Nos, telegraphs:

"You might add to the locally famous crack, 'If the depression keeps up in Wall street, within six months there won't be a pickpocket left'—that all stocks will go back—but not to the right parties."

In Fewer Words

The most beautiful girl in the world is the one you're about to get.

Scenes That Make Me Cry

(From Tatling)

She was tall, slim and smartly stiff. She was scented sweetly and she was swanky. Ooh, my dear! Lorgnettes and everything. The type that gets dizzy from looking down on people. She gave a great impression of a snob at the popular Club Abbey.

Suddenly she decided she was bored, so adjusting her spectacles, she picked up her skirts and swished out with her big head higher than Central Park Casino prices.

And what happened? She stumbled and fell flat on her nose with nobody going to her assistance. The laughter, however, became deafening when a clown cried:

"There should have been steps there!"

The Broadway Way

You might recall how this column recently aided a fashionable beach club to find a pretty girl to serve as singer and ciggie peddler—the girl getting the job being permitted to pocket all tips—besides her salary.

Well, a little lady from Harrisburg, Pa., Got The Job, and of course what with this and what with that, she was so busy she couldn't find time to jot down a note of thanques.

A note, however, was received yesterday from her, in which she wished that we didn't mention the fact that she is a Junior Leaguer because that organization "resents it," and if possible she would rather not be mentioned at all.

Verily, madame.

Add Great Similes

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Take Time to Keep Your Body Fit!

Health is a problem of proper nourishment, physical and mental activity and rest.

In this connection, diet has been much discussed. The errors in diet of a large majority of people account for much poor health.

DR. COPELAND

Our food budget should be divided so that it includes one-third of milk products (milk, cream or cheese); not less than one-third of fruits and vegetables, and one-third or less for meats, poultry and fish. More people should adopt this division of the foods.

The body is made up of cells. These must be built up constantly by the correct food intake and nothing less than nourishing foods in proper quantity and quality will maintain good health.

Well-conditioned muscles are the basis of good health. If you have active muscles, strong heart muscles, then the poisons of the wastes of the body can not affect them.

The body must be in good trim to throw off these poisons. It eliminates poisons by means of the kidneys, the lungs, the skin and the bowels. There must be normal functioning of all these parts.

Active physical exercise deepens the breathing, induces perspiration and keeps the muscles tight and elastic. That is why you need daily moderate use of the muscles of the body.

Constipation is almost universal today. People do not take time to keep fit. You cannot have healthy elimination without good muscle tone. Include in your diet foods that have bulk and roughage as aids in elimination of the wastes of the body.

Eating plenty of fruits is of the greatest value. Drink a glass of orange juice every morning before breakfast and see how much better you feel.

Drink lots of water. The body uses up quantities of water in a day. It must be replenished regularly. We are apt to forget this for long hours and then wonder why we do not feel well. We store up trouble by this neglect.

Man's work and play today are at high tension. They are a drain on the nervous system. Nerve output must be compensated for in two ways, by muscular action and by relaxation.

A person cannot go on and on using up nervous and muscular energy without rest and relaxation. Those who get eight, even seven hours of good sound sleep out of the 24 usually feel well and fit.

The greatest healers of our ills are sunshine and the out-of-doors. Get outdoors all you can, learn to play and laugh.

Tomorrow's Horoscope

Friday, July 18

An eventful but general hazardous state of affairs is the augury based on this day's planetary operations. The dominant place of Uranus hints of sudden change or disruption, with new employment and environment which may not be considered entirely welcome or advantageous. There are hazards in these new ventures, and while personal contacts may bring some satisfaction yet, even these have their undesirable angles. An all round discretion is enjoined.

Those whose birthday it is are on the eve of an adventurous year, with much unforeseen change and probably travel. Employment and environment are subject to change, and personal affiliations, although having some beneficial aspects, call for discretion. Be careful with funds and writings.

A child born on this day is likely to have a restless and unsettled nature inciting to frequent change of employment and environment.

HUMAN INTEREST IN THEIR STORIES

Experiences of Sick People Grown Well Reveal Real Interest.

Experiences of people who have used World's Tonic with remarkable results, continue to come into the hands of the manufacturers of this new remedy, prepared after patient research in the laboratories of the world. Some of the stories of people who have long been sick and now are well read like miracle. For they tell a human interest story of sickness, hope and recovery that has all the elements of tragedy as well as relief. Take the story told by Mrs. Mary Pitsch of 1511 Fifth Ave., Arnold, Pa., as an example. Take her own words:

"For months I was sick with stomach trouble and constipation. I had to take different kinds of medicine in order to get my bowels in move. I had pain in my shoulders and lower part of my back. The most trouble started after I had the flu. I got so weak that I could not do my housework, and I suffered much pain. At times it seemed to me the inside of my head would burst and my stomach and bowels were out of order. I had not a day passed with out pain. I could eat no dinner. I got so that I would digest a good meal of the time, and I had horrible dreams night after night. Many times since I would be awakened by them, so frightened I did not dare go to sleep.

"When I began taking World's Tonic these troubles left me so quickly that the whole thing seems now like a bad dream. I hadn't taken this wonderful new medicine a week until I began to feel better, and in three weeks I knew I was on the road to recovery. Nothing I ever took, and I tried many, quickly relieved me like World's Tonic, and in my case, for it gave me more strength each day, and with this strength it overcame my sickness completely, so that now I have no pain that I ever was so miserable. I have gained in weight and have a good color in my face."

Many other people right in this neighborhood tell every day about what this new medicine has done for them. It is creating a real sensation among the people of Pittsburgh, because for many it is the first hope they have had in months. World's Tonic can be obtained of Doc's Mock Liquor Store, Inc., or any other first class drug store. (A-95)

The very minute you put it on the face it gets down deep into the skin and cleans out the dirt. It removes blackheads, closes the pores and makes the skin smooth, good-looking and youthfully fresh. You'll notice, too, that the skin is not only cleansed with perspiration that streaks make-up.

If you want a smooth, soft, beautiful skin, free from large pores, blackheads, crow's feet and oiliness, just get 3 ounces of Orchard White from your druggist and mix it with the juice of 2 lemons. Then you have a full quarter-pint of the finest lotion you have ever used. Try it.

Note: During the summer months this amazing lotion is indispensable to the outdoor girl. It keeps the skin smooth and ice from freckles, and guards against that leathery, aged-worn look caused by sun and wind.

MANDELL, SINGER PRIMED FOR TITLE FIGHT

NIGHT BASEBALL PIONEER HERE

Two views of young Al Singer, New York's new Benny Leonard. He boxes Sammy Mandell for the world lightweight championship tonight. He should win, but will he? Will he suffer from the ring fright that comes from the consciousness of boxing a champion and thus dub his big chance, or will he forget that he is in the presence of greatness and fight the battle of which he is capable and win?

AL SINGER, New York's best fistic drawing card, comes to the fork of the road in his career tonight, when he meets Sammy Mandell, of Rockford, Ill., in a 15-round battle involving the latter's world lightweight championship. They clash in the Yankee Stadium, where the recent Jack Sharkey-Max Schmeling bout for the heavyweight title was staged.

Sammy Mandell

Not in years has a young lightweight contender faced the glorious opportunity that is before Singer. He appears to have every chance to win and make good the proud boasts and fond hopes of his army of followers. Young and strong and endowed with boxing skill and a punch that strikes with lightning suddenness, he is meeting up with a cagy campaigner who has gone over the hill and will have only experience in his favor.

Singer should win, but it is no cinch that he will. Full many a time similar promising youngsters have been stopped short of a championship simply because the very idea of being opposed by a champion has frightened them and robbed them of their ability when the zero hour arrived. In other words, they have fought the title and not the man, and the title has proved an impasse.

MANDELL KNOWS the advantage he will carry into the ring with him and he knows that if he handles it well it will more than counterbalance the years that mantle his shoulders and the energy he has given up in the arduous task of making the weight.

If Singer can close his eyes to the fact that he is facing a champion and fight his fight, he will win. If not, he will prove just another Jimmy McLarnin against one of the cleverest men the division has known.

A CONTENDER to win either has to be a reckless soul or be able to attune himself mentally to disregarding the bogieman that lurks behind a title. Gene Tunney was able to do this when he fought the greatly feared Dempsey at Philadelphia. An onlooker might have guessed that Tunney and not Dempsey was the champion that night for Gene, his nerves under perfect control, was the man who fought with confidence, while his opponent, the champion, harassed and worried, enacted the role of the flustered challenger.

A VICTORY for Singer tonight will be a good thing for boxing. He should make a good champion, one hard to defeat, and the sport needs such a tonic after the epidemic of fouling in recent major matches, particularly in the heavyweight division. The game is in the doldrums everywhere. Only a few nights ago, a match between Lew Massey and Eddie Shea had to be called off at the eleventh hour in Detroit because the gate was too slim to pay the fighters. This condition is general throughout the country, and managers now are glad to take hundreds of dollars where formerly they demanded thousands in purses. Incidentally, the Mandell-Singer fight will be the first official test of the non-foul rule in New York state.

THE GREATEST EVIL against which a college football coach has to guard is overconfidence on the part of his players. But football isn't the only sport in which this fact holds true. It extends to all branches. Just now, for instance, it is claimed that the main reason the Philadelphia Athletics are experiencing so much difficulty in gaining an edge over their rivals in the American League scramble is because the players on the club—virtually the same aggregation that ran away with last year's race and then crushed the Cubs in the world series—are taking too much for granted. They know they are good and think they can step out any time they get ready and breeze through to the pennant.

THIS STATE OF AFFAIRS is worrying Manager Connie Mack no little. The tall tactician has been through too many mills not to recognize the danger signs when he sees them, and as a result he has been reading the riot act to his men. He has not had much success in getting their feet planted along the proper path, however.

'Tis said the world champions are larkadaisical, acting as if they ha' lost the desire to win. Not that they do not want to win and cash in on the world series, but they just won't exert themselves. Whereas last year they were fighting all of the way to come through, they now are considering ultimate success in the light of a foregone conclusion, an' may be riding for a fall.

Verily, the easy conquest of last year may prove a boomerang to Connie's forces. If they had not won so decisively, they would not be so cocksure now, and would be making doubly certain of their pennant eggs before figuring on hatching them. Better teams and individuals have paid the penalty for such an attitude.

IT IS TOO BAD that Gallant Fox will not be ready to step out of its division and run in the all-age Arlington Cup classic at Arlington Park on Saturday, as planned, and demonstrate its superiority as a thoroughbred champion of the first rank. In this field will be such famous horses as Blue Larkspur, Misstep, Sun Beau, Petee Wrack, Toro and The Nut. It is conceivable that Earl Sande's mount, running in anything like its true form, could outstep the stellar field over

SAMMY SLIGHT FAVORITE TO COP TONIGHT

By DAVIS J. WALSH.
International News Service Sports Editor

NEW YORK, July 17.—Sammy Mandell, who started life with the mien and grace of a ballroom dancer and finished with the lightweight championship of the world, must dance as never before tonight or pay the piper's usurious toll.

He will meet Al Singer, rash with the confidence of the young, in a 15-round fight for the championship, and those sparkling feet must match, with guile, the speed and daring and vigor of the other or they will halt abruptly to dance no more. The eye is quicker than the hand, but Mandell is gambling tonight, as always, that the feet are quicker than both, and it is not to be said that the records play him false. Yet, if the will of the majority is served, he will finish the evening bereft of the title that has been his for five years.

CHAMP MAY WIN

There is always an air of breathless drama about a fight in which the champion is expected to expire. It gets down into the corpuscles and makes the blood race. It lends the thing a fictive glory. It fools you and makes you like it very much. So upward of $175,000 will come through the gates tonight to see the new champion crowned. I think it very possible that it will stay to see the old champion win.

The boys have managed to become highly unimpressed with Mandell as he comes forward to make this his second actual defense of the title. They don't like his legs. They say his 10 years in the ring number two too many. The weight, they add, is getting him and, finally, that he never was a great fighter. As to that, if anyone will show me a great fighter today, I'll guarantee to show him an alligator with sunburn.

FINE RECORD

Mandell hasn't as much as a blemish to show for his 10 years in action. He is not the man to be spattered all over the first three rows by some Humpty Dumpty from Council Bluffs, and though he has been hit by experts he has seldom forsaken the perpendicular. He has done 15 rounds, for example, against Jimmy McLarnin in the last two years without being seriously inconvenienced or abashed. McLarnin hit him, of course. So did Tommy Grogan, Tony Canzoneri and Billy Petrolle.

I think, in fact, that if there is any significance to be taken from this, it is that he is being hit with greater frequency as the years go on. However, if Mandell still was the man who defended the title here against McLarnin two years ago, there wouldn't be any argument and, after the sixth round, there probably wouldn't be any fight. It is the fact that Mandell is presumed to have slipped that gives Singer his great chance tonight.

Otherwise, it seems reasonable to expect that the champion having made weight only twice in five years and being abstemious almost beyond reason, will come up to this fight with at least some of the speed and stamina that once were his. He also will summon the great trinity that will be his always — experience, smartness, bravery.

CARNERA BOXES WRIGHT

OMAHA, Neb., July 17.—(INS.)—Primo Carnera, Italian behemoth, and Bearcat Wright, Omaha Negro heavyweight, meet here tonight in a 10-round battle. Carnera will tip the scales at 263 pounds, while Wright will weigh 218, according to tentative weights given out last night.

BOSTON, July 17.—Manager Ens and his Pirates were feeling none too pert today as they made ready for the third battle of the five-game set with the Braves. The 50-50 party staged in the Wigwam yesterday might have been regarded as a civic victory for the Tribe, but the Buccos had a more selfish mood. Ens and his charges think they should have socked the Braves twice on the button.

Larry French will be on the mound for the Pirates this afternoon. Ben Cantwell, a tall right hander, is due to twirl for the home team.

There was more than one expression of sympathy for Remy Kremer, who went into the ninth inning of the first game with a one-run lead. Kremer was within three putouts of his thirteenth success of the season when things began to happen. The first big event of the last half of the round was a double off the bat of Jimmy Welsh that made 12,000 fans cheer.

CHAMPIONSHIP PLAY

Hank Gowdy was at the plate with strict orders to bunt, and Hank was deeply engrossed in the effort when Al Bool and Charley Engle pulled a fast one on Hank and Jimmy Kremer wasted a pitch and Bool shot the ball to second like a flash. Welsh, being nipped by Engle.

A championship play, sure enough, and there was wild confusion in the home dugout. Gowdy had two strikes and no balls and Skipper Bill McKechnie pulled him away from the plate in favor of pinch-hitter Red Rollins. Red slapped a single to right and the tying run was on the sacks again.

Kremer still seemed to be the master, but in a twinkling everything was upset for the Pirates and the winning run was on the way to the plate. Earl Clark ran for Rollins and Fred Maguire hit what should have been a double to right-center. Clark deserved to score on the hit, but Grantham made a poor throw to Traynor after getting the relayed ball. The shot hit Maguire on the head and then deflected to the stands as the Holy Cross star went home in a barrage of excitement.

BUCS COP SECOND

Maguire's tally gave the home team a 4-to-3 victory and it made the Pirates as sore as a coop full of wet hens. They came on for the second game in a boisterous mood and by hitting the rocket to distant sections of the big field they were able to get an even break by winning the last encounter, 9 to 5.

Heinie Meine was on the slab throughout the last fracas, but the heroes of this game were Comorosky, Grantham and Bool. Comorosky and Grantham connected for homers, Commy had a field day at bat and on defense, while Farmer Al reeled off a number of fine plays to help the Pirate cause.

Bool had to catch both games owing to a foot injury which afflicted Rolly Hemsley. But Albert thrives on work and he was churning up plenty of pepper in the closing rounds of the last game.

Comorosky's hitting card for the day showed a homer, a triple and two doubles. The Polish flyer

FOX TO RACE IN ENGLAND

International News Service.

NEW YORK, July 17.—Gallant Fox will be shipped to England.

The great American champion will finish out his 3-year-old campaign in the United States.

Immediately after the running of the Jockey Club gold cup at Belmont Park, the mighty son of Sir Gallahad-Marguerite will be placed aboard an Atlantic liner and shipped to England.

This is to allow the sensational performing colt to become fully acclimatized before being asked to start on British soil.

Gallant Fox will race in as many stakes as he may prove eligible to start in. The Ascot Gold Cup is the main objective of his trip abroad.

The decision to send Gallant Fox to England after international honors was not arrived at suddenly. William Woodward, owner of the super-horse, races an extensive string of thoroughbreds in England. The latter have cut quite a figure in British racing circles during the past few seasons.

Gallant Fox is to be raced a full season in England. Following this foreign campaign, he will return to the United States for stud duty at the Belair stud, near Baltimore.

A couple of victories in England would do much to increase the value of Gallant Fox as a sire.

CLEVELAND, July 17.—I see they are linking up a special day this week for Rabbit Maranville in connection with the three hundredth anniversary of the founding of Boston. Rabbit has been with the Braves almost that long. He was pitching tea at the time of the Boston tea party and he played first base at the Battle of Bunker Hill. Rabbit was later traded to Philadelphia along with Benjamin Franklin and two infielders. Then he came back to Boston in 1786, where he's been playing shortstop ever since. No wonder they are holding a celebration for the Tercentenary kid of baseball.

ROBINS KEEP THREE-GAME LEAD IN NATIONAL

CUBS SPLIT TWIN BILL IN BROOKLYN

Associated Press

The National League's latest crucial battle is a stand-off with perhaps a slight tinge of moral victory for the Brooklyn Robins. They got an even break as they opened a series with the Chicago Cubs with a double-header. The Robins remained in first place by a three-game margin and left the Cubs too far behind to overtake them even by winning all the remaining games of the series.

Pat Malone pitched a five-hit game and the Cubs won it, 6 to 4, but Wilbert Robinson countered with old Adolfo Luque in the second contest and the Robins backed him up with some heavy hitting to win, 5 to 3. There was a capacity crowd of 31,000, with some 10,000 more fans turned away.

TOSS POP BOTTLES

Del Bissonnette knocked himself out sliding into the plate in the first game. The fans thought Gabby Hartnett was the cause of the damage and started tossing pop bottles. Luque and his rival, Charley Root, nearly became embroiled over a "dusting off" incident and two coaches and Manager McCarthy of the Cubs were chased by the umpires for various reasons.

If the Cubs win all three games that are left, they still will be in second place and must then tackle the New York Giants while the Robins are entertaining slightly easier opposition in the St. Louis Cardinals.

Neither the Giants nor the Cards looked like serious opponents yesterday. They both were victims of hitting sprees by low ranking clubs. The Giants lost an 8-1 decision and the series to the Cincinnati Reds as Red Lucas gave a few less hits than his mates made. Phil Collins kept the Cards under control while the Phillies were pounding out a 10-to-5 victory.

The second division leaders, Boston and Pittsburgh, divided a double header.

EACH GET 15 HITS

The American League produced two tight pitching battles and three one-sided slugging bees without important changes in the standing. The Philadelphia Athletics added a half game to their lead over Washington by slamming out a 14-to-7 victory over Chicago as each team made 15 hits.

Washington divided a pair of heavy-hitting games with the Cleveland Indians. The Senators triumphed in the first contest 10 to 4, and Lefty Sheffner did very well in the second game and Cleveland won by a 13-to-6 count.

Ed Wells, of the New York Yankees, and Walter Stewart, rival southpaw from St. Louis, put on the leading pitching duel of the day and the Yankees gained a 2-to-1 victory on a pair of home runs. A few more blows turned up at Detroit, where the Tigers beat the Boston Red Sox 3 to 2.

NO NEW FOUL RULES HERE

PHILADELPHIA, July 17.—(INS)—Every precaution possible in advance of all bouts will be taken to prevent a repetition of the bitterly discussed foul ending of the Carnera-Godfrey bout here some time ago, the Pennsylvania State Athletic Commission announced following an all-day meeting of the three members here. However, after mature deliberations, the commissioners decided to create no new rules, but merely to apply the present regulations firmly at all times.

Boxers who bring the boxing sport into disrepute by fouling or claiming fouls gradually will be eliminated, the commission intimated.

Five boxers were dealt out punishments at the weekly session while two boxers and two managers were reinstated.

The boxers punished included Eddie Brink, Scranton featherweight, 30 days suspension; Herman Wiener, Baltimore heavyweight, who ran out of a match with Jack Gross at Liepersville last Tuesday night, indefinite suspension; Dud Eades, Pittsburgh; James Neill, Cincinnati; and Marty Collins, Philadelphia, also were placed on the indefinite suspension list.

Johnny Copes, Philadelphia, and Tiger Joe West, Monessen, boxers, were reinstated as were Tommy Freeman, Erie boxer, and A. L. Kestner, Monessen, manager.

Whirlwind Quits Yacht Race Series

NEWPORT, R. I., July 17.—(AP)—The yacht Whirlwind, largest of the four contenders for the honor of defending the America's Cup off here in September, today was withdrawn by its owners from the current observation series and sent back to a shipyard at City Island, N. Y. The other three, Yankee, Weetamoe and Enterprise will race today.

Weetamoe scored its fifth straight victory yesterday.

BELTING RIVALS DO BATTLE TONIGHT

Two hard-punching middleweights, Mickey Solomen, of New Castle, and Jack Wilson, of the North Side, meet in the 10-round main bout of the weekly boxing show at Hickey Park, Millvale, tonight.

The bout marks their third meeting. In each of the first two clashes, each had the other on the floor. Wilson dropped Solomen early in their first scrap at the Moose Temple, but couldn't keep him on the floor, and Mickey came back to win by a knockout. In their second bout at Hickey Park, Mickey floored Wilson in the first round and was dropped himself later, and they finished up in a draw.

Both are out to win by a knockout tonight, and the fans who witnessed their first two biffing bees will be out to see them go again. A bout with Buck McTiernan is in prospect for the winner.

Jack Townsend, veteran Negro heavyweight, meets Ike McFowler, Negro of Johnstown, in the eight-round semi-final. Angelo Vergione, of Swissvale, and U. S. Carpentier, of New Kensington, featherweights, are in the second bout, and Billy Campbell, a newcomer from the South Side, mixes with Jimmy Thomas, Negro bantam, of the Hill, in the opener.

Between Rounds

Joe Grim, boxes Jimmy Squires in the 10-round semi-final to the Sammy Mandell-Al Singer 15-round battle for the lightweight championship of the world at the Yankee Stadium, New York, tonight. Midget Wolgast, flyweight champion, takes on Emile Pladner in a special eight-round bout after the main event.

Ralph Cerra, of Carnegie, cousin of Midget Mike Moran, who formerly fought under the name of Tommy Moran, is back in training and advises he inherited all of the local lad's pounders. He has hated Andy Andruzzi, Eddie Marks, Joe Fortis and Tug Phillips among others. Midget Mike is his manager. He may be reached by calling Carnegie 1250-J.

Three champions have been entered among the team of 15 in the Santa A. C. of Uniontown, for the Golden Glove athletic tournament to be held under the auspices of American Legion Post No. 98, of Bradford, North Bradford and Ramsay, in the Masons Bowl, North Braddock, Thursday and Friday nights of next week. They are Joey Speight, national junior lightweight champion; Dan Apicella, A. A. U. second featherweight champion and Charles Cassetta, A. A. U. second welterweight champion.

Ray Miller and Frankie Hayes will meet in the semi-final to the Bobby Rand-Lou Cassinelli bout at the Phillies Park, Philadelphia, next Monday night. Allie Wolfe models Tom Tedesco, Mickey Doyle bosses Matty White and Emory Cabana engages Joey Maffeld in other bouts on the card.

Harry Harris, of Bellaire, O., boxes Jimmy Darragh to one of the bouts of a card for the benefit of the family of Young Bryan, the boxer who recently died following a bout, at Wheeling tomorrow night.

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., July 17.—Johnstown collected a pair of runs in the second inning to proceed against Clarksburg to win their Mid-Atlantic League game, 2 to 1, here yesterday.

At Scottdale, the home club continued in its batting slump and lost to Jeannette, 9 to 3. The Charleroi Governors came through by nosing out the Fairmont Club, 3 to 1, on the latter's field.

FRENCH FACES BRAVES TODAY

was a streak on the bases and he dove around the paths and he made one play by climbing up the left field wall to rob Walter Berger of a hit. Berger however, slapped out his twenty-fifth homer of the season in the second game.

Manager Ens threw Dick Bartell back into action in the last fight and the lively youngster speeded up the play of the club. Engle fell down in the first game with three runners on the sacks and none out, so Ens apparently decided that Bartell belonged in the fight. Dick has been hitting around the .300 mark.

SHERDEL BEATEN

Bill Sherdell tried to check the Buccos in the second fight, but the task was too heavy for the former Cardinal left-hander. The home team was first to score in this game, making two runs in the third. Grantham and Comorosky made successive homers in the fourth to tie it up and the Pirates treated themselves to three more runs in the fifth. They were not headed off after that frame. The Buccos put the game on the ice in the sixth by scoring four times.

Zachary held the Buccos to five hits. Bool clicked one into the left field bleachers, the ball hitting the signboard in the rear of this section. This was the only run of this contest up to that point.

Al Bool's long homer in the fifth inning of the early game was the first Pirate hit off a left-hander in more than 11 innings. Pie Traynor singled off Bill Clark in the second inning on the previous afternoon in Brooklyn. Clark proceeded to reel off seven hitless rounds and Tom Zachary kept the Buccos hitless in the first four innings of his joust with the Enamen.

Comorosky enhanced the Pirate lead to the extent of a run in the seventh when he tripled to right-center with P. Waner on second and two out.

KREMER HURLS WELL

Kremer was the complete master of the situation up to the seventh. Lance Richbourg then won a break as he singled just out of the reach of Gus Suhr. Welsh followed with a double to right. Lance reaching third.

At this juncture lady luck frowned upon the Pirate pitcher. Catcher Bill Cronin was due to hit but Johnny Neun went up to the plate for him. The former Blue Ridger topped his shot and the Pirate infield being back, Suhr could not make a play on the ball. One run went over, another went to third and the winning marker was on first with none out. Maguire sent a medium-length fly to P. Waner, whose return to the plate was wide. Welsh scoring the tying run. Neun skipped to center on the play, but Kremer tightened and there was no more scoring in the inning.

Suhr didn't lose much time in getting an important run around to third. The big Dutchman drove a long, thrilling three-bagger to the fence in left center. Gus sprinted over on Engle's fly to Richbourg.

SWISSVALE WINS

The Swissvale American League nine defeated the Edgewood League Club, 7 to 6, yesterday in the first game of a two-game series to decide the championship of the thirty-third district. The next game will be played Saturday afternoon at Edgewood.

BOARD'S WHEAT REPLACED

WASHINGTON, July 17.—Sale of some 2,000,000 or more bushels of the 1929 wheat by the Wheat Stabilization Corporation in satisfaction of mill contracts has been mostly replaced by purchases from the 1930 crop according to S. R. McKelvie of the Federal Farm Board.

J. C. Stone another member of the board, said that the Cotton Stabilization Corporation is now taking up its cotton from the 1929 crop by purchase from cotton co-operatives.

GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, July 17.—Influenced by renewal of dry weather complaints from Canada, wheat prices rallied today after a sag at the opening. Yesterday's late reports of moisture relief for drought sections of the spring crop belt appeared to have been of less benefit than was at first assumed. Starting unchanged to ½c off, wheat afterward rose all around to above yesterday's finish, but the gains failed to hold well, corn, oats and provisions were firmer, with corn opening at ⅛c off to ⅜c up, and subsequently scoring a general advance.

The following quotations on the Chicago Board of Trade are reported by A. E. Masten & Co.:

Still Has Faith in Country's Good Health

By B. C. FORBES

[illegible]

I am one of this country's many stockholders. As such I have had and still have the utmost faith in this country's industries and fundamental good health. I am one of those who have watched their securities flop from their real normal and artificially inflated market values ridiculous and scandalous lows. I am one of those who have felt that perhaps we had it coming to us. If long-placed faith in fundamentals and economic principles I look and only to my own view but that of dozens paid investment services. I have taken a beating standing up.

But when all basic principles point to a completion of near completion of the down curve and when the particular securities I own represent a flourishing industry which is not only depression proof but one which during these lean years has increased 55 odd per cent over last year and still the values drop it seems too much.

It seems too much that big men have not only taken a proper hand but that they have not generated it at least permitted a dangerously increasing purchasing of doubt and pessimism to spread. It seems too much that men and institutions who have some influence should spend it destructively should even directly belittle the salutary confidence held by American people in their President. It not only seems too much not only is it unpatriotic but it is suicidal.

"What can my conclusions be—that I have been wrong in my faith in my country? By—it, I still have it.

FROM [illegible] comes [illegible]

"Why can't our poor public see that now is the time to buy good stocks—not this fall when they are sky high again" There is nothing wrong with business. Looks like a few of the big bears are giving a slap to the administration.

Let's get back in the market with our money—quit worrying and get the bad news out of the air before something does turn up to worry about. Things are going fine through the Middle West. Just get big interests to start work and labor will start to spend as always.

COMMENTING [illegible] Crane's recent gift of $1,000,000 in stock to employees of the Crane Company, Inc., Forbes says:

"R. T. Crane's action in dispensing a block of wealth intelligently to a great number of employees is an example of what is needed, but it is from a source that is not representative of the trend in American business. Big corporations—holding companies—show no such tendency toward humane interests and it is becoming as true today as when the Sherman act was passed and Teddy waved his 'Big Stick' that the greed of supercorporations is concentrating wealth and reducing the popular diffusion of the big necessity to prosperity—dollars."

FROM George H. Linden comes a very bitter letter comparing the action taken by Mr. Crane with that of other corporations which have not hesitated to discharge employes indiscriminately. He says:

"I think unemployment conditions could be helped a lot by big business if, when finding it necessary to lay off help, it would pick out the married women whose husbands are also working. I think it is time for business and also city employes to look over their payrolls and give the white collar man a chance to support his family."

Chicago to Trade In Lamb Futures

CHICAGO, July 17 (AP).—Success which has attended establishment of future delivery trading here in live hogs has led to arrangements for similar transactions in feeding lambs.

Hereafter on the Chicago livestock exchange 10 different kinds and weights of feeding lambs will be traded in for August, September and October delivery.

The purpose is to enable a sheep raiser to sell his lambs at a definite price while they are still on the range and to know exactly what he will be paid at delivery.

Range Could Raise Meat for 4,000,000

WASHINGTON, July 17.—In a report to the Commission on Conservation and Administration of the Public Domain, the Geological Survey states that use of the surface of public lands need not interfere with the mineral value of the land. It is estimated that the range land could produce the annual meat requirements for a population of 4,000,000 without interfering with prospecting and developing mineral resources.

NEW YORK BOND MARKET

TRUSTS TAKING 'TIPS' FROM ENGLISH

Better Managed Companies Modifying Policies—See Rapid Trade Recovery

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER

NEW YORK, July 17.—Having in the recent bear markets gone through their baptism of fire the better managed American investment trusts are modifying their policies to conform more to the English experience.

The British trusts went through a long period beginning with the Baring crash of 1890 and members profited by the experience. Most of the well established English investment trusts now maintain large cash reserves, refrain from using call loans and brokers' loans, diversify their investments both as to number of issues held and field of operation. Profits on securities are not counted upon as regular income, but are treated as capital gains. Frequently during years when the boom is on the trusts sell a large part of their holdings and build up cash reserves to be employed in the post-boom period.

Unfortunately many American trusts were in the midst of one of the years when the bull market reached its crest. They acquired securities at high prices before they were able to accumulate large reserves. They originally set out as trading companies intending to pay dividends not out of income but out of speculative profits. The process explained, during them selves up by their bootstraps and was feasible only during a special phase of the speculative cycle. The attempt was associated with the newer economics to the effect that consumption of commodities is limited only by production and that business accordingly would "fear" endless cycle more upward. Conservative bankers specializing in investment trusts now are skeptical of the newer economics believing the doctrine leads to a capricious spiral.

SWING BACKWARD

There has been a swing backward to more orthodox economics since the new era and numerous investment bankers believe that the current world-wide depression springs from too much machinery resulting in excessive production.

They look upon the American recession as temporary in character and likely to terminate by the end of this year. The investment trust specialists attribute the rapid industrial recovery power of American business believe that American industrial trusts will recover far more rapidly than the British trusts did after the Baring crisis, though they are inclined to think that their return to popular favor will be a rather prolonged process.

BANK SEEN AS HELP

In the new Bank for International Settlements which springs from the Young plan more than a legal gesture" Lombard street the English financial center is hopeful that it may mean something more. The Midland Bank in its current review says:

"One factor of hope stands out above all others and is quite distinct from them in that it is a matter, not of mechanics, but of human relationships. During the last few years the first halting steps have been taken towards co-operation between central banks in the interests of the world's economic and financial welfare. The monetary reconstruction of Europe provides tangible evidence of the efficacy and potentialities of such co-operation. At one time, moreover, close community of action was visible between the monetary authorities of the United States and Great Britain. Recently, however, progress in this direction has not been striking, and it has become apparent that the rate of advance is determined by the least progressive of the principal central banks. The pace is set by the slowest.

"Now that regularity and breadth have been assured, through the constitution and meetings of the Bank for International Settlements, there is reasonable hope that the pace may be quickened, and that the more progressive central banks may be able to exercise a stronger influence towards fuller, more consistent co-operation. The technical means have been provided by the use of which the world's monetary authorities may be able the more readily and securely to advance step by step towards the goal of monetary management on a world basis. The future lies, as before, with the central banks themselves, but the facilities afforded by the Bank for International Settlements may make it easier for them to work in harmonious collaboration for the reduction or complete elimination of large-scale monetary disturbances attributable to individualism rampant upon the gold standard. If the opportunity thus presented is seized, then humanity will have found relief from one of its heaviest economic burdens, and the world will be a better habitat for the millions who now find it anything but a happy hunting ground."

Street Hears Texas Land Trust Will Retire More Shares

Among the new pieces of which developed [illegible] day after the [illegible] Texas Pacific Land Trust was a notable feature. Strength here was based upon an announcement of the redemption of another sizable block of the trust's outstanding shares. Specifically the company stands ready to buy 10,000 shares additional had been tendered. Such tendering for the period of [illegible] a large block of the shares were bought and retired in order to [illegible] increasing the equity of the remaining shares in the vast property holdings of the company, much of which is now being worked under lease by various oil and mineral companies.

Commenting on the business situation in the course of an inspection of one of the retail stores maintained by the company in the eastern part of New York State A. G. Baumhogger vice president of Montgomery Ward, expressed the opinion that business of the country is on the mend. He said that general industrial business in the country is on the rise and that all indications show the low point of the depression has been passed. Optimism is returning Mr. Baumhogger finds, putting forth the belief that prosperity "depends on the determination of the people to produce it."

Although the stock market drive for higher prices has gone on a new tangent recently and departed the accepted market leaders for a list of secondary favorites observers say there is no question but that the ability of stocks to absorb the early selling pressure is useful testimony as to the market's underlying strength. Evidences of distribution have been detected in a number of ranking specialties as leaders while artificial stimulation has been applied to the motor, oil and miscellaneous sections. The continued elimination of the short interest has left the market as a whole more vulnerable to unanticipated business development of an adverse nature.

Students who place reliance on market performance from their charts, still hold to the belief that a technical reaction appears due. They point out that, based on the Dow Jones averages of 30 industrial stocks, these had advanced to 237 at the high of Tuesday's upturn. This represented a gain of 30 points from the absolute low established on June 25. A further advance of 5 points to 242 would represent a 50 per cent recovery of the 70-point loss during the June reaction. However, a number of stocks individually have already equaled or exceeded this technical recovery point. Among them are American Can, American Telephone, General Electric, Union Carbide and United States Steel.

Electric Auto Lite was a feature of noteworthy strength in the motor accessory class this morning. The great activity in the stock at sharply ascending prices reflected the operations of the Fisher interests who are large holders of the shares. It is understood that W. C. Durant and Arthur Cutten are co-operating with the Fishers in the current demonstration. The company's earnings this year have been well sustained owing to the large volume of Ford business it has been receiving. Electric Auto Lite furnishes starting and lighting equipment for the entire Ford output. It also provides these requirements for most other leading automobile producers except General Motors.

David Sarnoff, president Radio Corporation of America, who sailed aboard the Bremen for Europe, told the Wall Street Journal that the company's surplus inventory has been disposed of and production of new machines is now going ahead at an increased rate.

"The radio industry," he said, "has passed through a very trying stage and it is just about able now to sense the turn toward improved conditions. Surplus inventory with which the company has been burdened during past months, has at last been disposed of to the public and completely adjusted to current condition in the industry, and Radio Corporation appears to have reached the end of a depressed period.

"Earnings for the first six months will not offer much encouragement. But that is all past now and it is confidently hoped that operations for the last half of the year will prove much more satisfactory."

Wheat Price Control Plans Blocked

By GEORGE H. SNYDER

ATTEMPTS TO STABILIZE commodity prices by government aid appear to have come to a standstill. In spite of further political agitation to get the Federal Farm board to go even farther into the wheat business there seems to be no disposition on the part of the individuals in charge of the farm relief machinery to continue their recent experiments.

Alex Legge, chairman of the Farm Board, has definitely stated that the Grain Stabilization Corporation does not intend to buy any of the present crop. On the other hand he has said that he will not attempt to liquidate any of the $50,000,000 investment in the carryover of the last crop until prices improve.

In a year of grain stabilization attempts the price of wheat has dropped from about $1.25 a bushel to about 90 cents a bushel, the lowest since pre war days. It appears quite apparent to most bankers that Legge has become convinced of the ineffectiveness of the past year's operations. If it was good policy for the board to buy wheat a year ago at $1.25 a bushel it would still seem advisable to help the farmer to buy it at 90 cents, unless it has been proved that such efforts toward stabilization are too costly.

Capper Asks More Purchases

SENATOR CAPPER OF KANSAS still thinks that the wheat situation can be helped by government buying. He recently recommended a further purchase of 100,000,000 bushels. Members of the Farm Board are not in agreement with this idea. They state that such a purchase might help prices for a short time but would exert an opposite effect when the grain was sold.

The board members have pointed to the cost of over a cent a bushel a month for carrying wheat as a reason why even the government cannot hope to hold an enormous quantity indefinitely unless there is some chance of liquidating at a good price.

Reduced Acreage Sought

STABILIZATION ATTEMPTS are now being limited to a campaign to induce farmers to curtail their wheat acreage. Just as the market activities of the board were criticized in many quarters, this plan has not received unqualified approval.

Some crop experts state that curtailment of acreage would be desirable only if it could be accomplished on a world wide basis. With farmers here producing less wheat, while those of other countries, particularly Russia, are increasing their planting this country may merely lose a large portion of its export trade without helping the price situation to more than a minor extent. The low price for the present crop is likely to be particularly discouraging to a planting of a large wheat acreage on farms suitable for other crops.

Wheat Price Battle Lost

THE GREAT BATTLE for the control of the wheat market, waged by the United States and Canada against the rest of the world, has come out badly for this continent. The Grain Stabilization Corporation of this country and the Canadian wheat pool are still holding a large share of last year's crop of prices averaging 35 cents a bushel lower than a year ago. Those in control of wheat in the South American continent had counted on short crops in other parts of the world to force the consuming countries to pay a higher price than at the end of the last crop year. But the crops was safe to go along without binding up the price of wheat. The American crops are practically as large as last year and the large surplus of wheat still is being carried at a heavy cost.

TO REORGANIZE WAVERLY OIL

A change in the capital structure of the Waverly Oil Works Company will take place in the near future. This was announced in a letter sent to stockholders last night following the completion of the sale of the company's retail distributing organization to the Standard Oil Company of Pennsylvania.

T. J. Hilliard, president of Waverly, said today that he was not in a position to discuss the details of the change at this time.

The balance sheet of October 31, 1929, showed notes payable of $225,000, mortgages of $362,500, 40,000 shares of $3 cumulative class A stock and 30,000 shares of class B stock outstanding.

The last dividend on the A stock was paid July 1, 1929. The A stock is callable at $50 a share.

Harbison-Walker Earnings Steady

J. E. Lewis, president of Harbison-Walker Refractories Company, estimates net earnings for the second quarter of 1930 at $1,116,000 after depreciation, depletion and federal taxes. Earnings for the first quarter were $1,436,000, making the total for the first half of this year $2,552,000, or $1.70 a share. This compares with $2,505,000 for the first six months of 1929, or $1.67 a share.

AMSTERDAM, Holland, July 17.—A move to restrict rubber production among all producers under Dutch control was made today by the Netherlands rubber producers at a meeting here.

The producers by a vote of 103 to 18 decided to ask the Netherlands colonial administrators to take steps to effect the restriction of rubber production by all Dutch producers, including natives.

Packard Sales Set New Record in June

DAILY TRUE STORY

Popular Girl

"Pumpkins" she had written to Johnnie Burnham (Wood land Johnnie didn't like the idea about pumpkins.

"Well Lucia I don't know more than three days extra work with them planting and harvesting. We have to weed the corn anyway and I always get more than two hundred dollars for them.

Pumpkins Luella scoffed again because she couldn't find any more suitable answer and she knew that two hundred dollars was a big sum of money.

Johnnie wanted to marry Luella. A lot of the boys around Pleasant Valley wanted to marry her. She was to use their own expression in that district as "pretty as a picture."

Luella couldn't see carrying Johnnie. Not at all!

Johnnie was good enough—awful nice hard-working steady boy but to bury herself in a farm—that was out!

Now and then Johnnie took Luella down to the movies. They'd see some sophisticated picture showing the crowded streets the great roof-tops the supposed night clubs and such things.

"As shucks Johnnie would say that must be an awful life to live cooped up there in a city."

This always angered Luella.

"Cooped up! You're crazy Johnnie the city is the one place to be. You aren't cooped up there you have freedom. I'm going to the city just as soon as I can."

"That's right Luella get and take a good look and then come back to me we'll be married right off."

"You say such funny things Johnnie."

"Come now Luella you know I mean it."

"I hope to tell you I'm all fed up on farm life."

The time came when Luella could get away. Her younger sister had shot up strong and husky and could do the family wash. Johnnie pretended to be cheerful about it but he felt pretty badly over it.

"You'll be back after you see the city Luella."

"After I see enough of it and that won't be forever."

"I should hope it wouldn't be forever."

Johnnie kissed her at the station to her great embarrassment.

"Write to me Lu dear remember we're going to be married before long" he whispered.

Luella got on the train and as it moved away and she got a last glimpse of the country she grinned.

Thrilled by City

"Like fun I'll ever come back" she muttered.

One couldn't blame Luella too much. Ever since she had been knee-high to a duck there had been more work than play at home and from the time she was twelve it seemed as though there was nothing except work—save the Saturday night movie which she never missed.

The big city thrilled her even more than she expected to be thrilled.

The lights along the "White Way" were much more impressive than the movies gave you any idea about. The tall buildings were much more wonderful when seen in actuality.

Luella knew just how to proceed. Mr. Spriggings the station master at the Junction had sent her to his widowed sister who kept a rooming house. She went there and found the room, a small, dark one, looking down over backyard fences and clothes lines but it was her room and the clothes out there she hadn't put out and she wouldn't have to take in!

There were movie theaters all around, everywhere!

She went to one her first night there, a big place with gold and velvet and a wonderful organ. This was living.

Defeats Job

She did this a day avg. she in an office where the pumpkin phones of the pumpkin drink.

Now if Lucia had stopped to figure she would have seen that one girl couldn't cut up enough pineapples and put them through a stopper a mean sufficient pineapple sure for the crowd that roundabout ra- dialed Lucia for drinks.

But toward great Luella wore white.

Being a mighty pretty girl it is made her all the more attractive.

Steadily she toiled and the pineapples and added them to the supply.

For days and weeks she stood down at the river changing crowd with great interest.

But after four months the novelty of doing the crowd palled on her. They said the same things spilling the same lines smeared their lips the same way and waddered out.

As for pineapples well Luella detested them. When she first went to work she used to nibble bits of pineapple but now she'd rather nibble a chunk of coal—she hated the flavor and the sight and the smell.

More than that she got so lame and tired come night that she went to bed instead of first taking in some movie.

And it certainly cost a lot to eat and sleep in the city. She didn't have hardly any money left each week.

Johnnie wrote to her now and then. She had answered some of his letters at first and then he had pestered her so much with letters about coming back and marrying him that she wrote and told him she was never coming back the sight of pumpkins drove her mad and the city was the only place for human beings to live anyway.

At this time a middle-aged man used to come every day for a drink and he always smiled at her. Then he came twice a day.

He got so he would say: Hello there.

One night he waited outside for her.

This is on the level little girl let's go to dinner he said.

Sure Luella said.

He didn't mind.

Nice Gentleman

He was mighty pleasant to her and told her that she was certainly a nice girl and a pretty one.

I know I'm nice Luella answered.

And you know you're pretty if you have a mirror.

He told her a lot about himself. He had a big place and plenty of money and he was mighty lonesome.

Luella went to a show with him she went to dinner several times a week with him. This Mr. Moland was certainly a thorough gentleman. He made her a present of a little wrist watch. One day he showed a picture of a great big house with palm and lawns all about it. There was a big automobile there and sure enough Mr. Moland was in the car. It was his car and there were colored servants about.

Luella he said that's the home you'd have if you married me.

It's wonderful! Luella gasped. She knew she was lucky. She was going to say Yes without hesitating.

I've got thousands of acres he said. Look.

He showed her more photographs.

What are those rows of things as far as you can see? she asked.

Pines he said.

Get out! I know a pine tree when I—

Pineapples? Luella yelled. Pineapples!

Yes my dear.

Oh for gosh sake! Luella said.

She got Johnnie on the long distance that night and he met her at the Junction the next night and drove her home. As she passed his place in the moonlight she snuggled up against him.

Gee Johnnie but them pumpkins look swell in the light like that," she said.

OUT IN THE OZARKS WHERE 75 CENTS IS 75 CENTS

(From the Lamar, Mo., Democrat.)

"Josh Box says Carl Hankins of Drywood had a bill against Joe Greer and went to collect and was told by Grant Greer that Joe would pay the bill, but Carl was going to have the 75 cents or know the reason. Grant thought if Carl wanted trouble he would pull off his shoes and accommodate him, but Carl did not wait and pasted Grant in the face a couple of times and then Grant got Carl down and Carl yelled for Mrs. Greer to pull Grant offen him, but she told Carl no until he promised to go home and behave himself. Carl after receiving a few more licks promised, and Grant let him up, but his face was badly pummeled."

Clifford Case Calls For Thorough Airing

Even if Joseph M. Clifford is right in his contention that he has been discharged from his position as assistant engineer in the Bureau of Building Inspection not for the reasons assigned but in retaliation for his support of James F. Malone in the mayoralty campaign last year, he should not count too strongly on obtaining redress from the Civil Service Commission.

The Republican or majority members of the commission, a body of three, are Dr. Fred H. Frederick, who was Mayor Charles H. Kline's campaign manager, and Dr. S. H. Johnson, the Mayor's brother-in-law. They and the Democratic member, J. Howard Devlin, were appointed to their positions by Mayor Kline.

The Civil Service Reform Act was passed to protect city employes from arbitrary dismissal for political reasons. The Civil Service Commission was created to enforce the act. But the attitude of the commission since Mayor Kline went into office, notably in the appeal of Murray Livingston, has given the impression that the board regards support of the Mayor and his aides as of more importance than protection of employes in their jobs. In a word, it has upheld the spoils system.

Nevertheless, it is well that Clifford has demanded a hearing. His charges call for thorough investigation, and it is desirable that the commission should again be placed on record.

Blunder in Construction Of Allegheny Boulevard

The blunder in the construction of the Allegheny River Boulevard, to which Col. Charles C. McGovern called attention at the County Commissioners' meeting the other day, seems to be a case of "the more haste the less speed."

The County Department of Public Works went ahead in blissful confidence that a way would be found to overcome the obstacle presented by the fact that the Pennsylvania Water Company's plant at Nadine stood directly in the route of the proposed highway; but the department neglected to adopt a definite plan to overcome the obstacle and make sure it was feasible. The consequence is that the contractors have reached the water plant and have been forced to remove their equipment to the other side, while there is still doubt as to just how the building will be circumvented.

If the blunder had been made by engineers employed in a private enterprise the employers no doubt would have made a terrific fuss about it. The incident seems to bear out the belief that public officials lack the sense of responsibility to their employers, the public, that they would have if employed by a commercial concern.

Some way will of course be found to get around the difficulty. The lesson is that it is dangerous to proceed in a big undertaking without a thoroughly worked out plan.

New Lincoln Highway Link Merits Ceremony

The Chamber of Commerce has arranged for a banquet to celebrate the completion of the new 35-mile link in the Lincoln Highway between Pittsburgh and East Liverpool, O. The governors of Pennsylvania, Ohio and West Virginia have been invited, and there is expectation of not a little pomp and ceremony.

The opening of the new route deserves feasting and oratory. It is a notable event, for it offers a boon to travelers. Instead of a rough, slow ride through heavily populated boroughs, over streets crowded with traffic, the traveler on the Lincoln Highway just west of Pittsburgh now passes over a smooth boulevard through a rural region.

The new route reduces the time required for journeys and takes the motorist through one of the most attractive sections of Western Pennsylvania, where pleasing views meet one on all sides.

The Lincoln Highway was the first of the transcontinental motor routes to attract widespread attention, and any improvement in it, like that now about to be celebrated, is of more than local interest.

Ambition to Excel Is Trait to Be Encouraged

We smile in amusement at the Negro boys in Brushton who have undertaken to set an endurance record for perching in the branches of a tree. Their stunt is characteristic of the age. Multitudes are possessed of the urge to excel their fellows. It rides them like an incubus, and if they despair of excelling in anything worth while they turn to something else, like tree perching, flagpole sitting, marathon dancing or the like. Anything to show superiority!

The people applaud these efforts. Those who are successful, even in the most ridiculous performances, are rewarded.

It is not that the public sees anything admirable in the stunts themselves, but it does admire the courage, stamina, self-sacrifice and other qualities that are essential to success.

The ambition to excel is a trait to be encouraged. It may be diverted into channels in which it will be useful.

A Story of a Whale

Or a Whale of a Story.

Those who go down to the sea in ships are proverbially honest, but now and then they strain your credulity a little. Take the crew of the Cunarder Samaria, which got into port the other day with the story that their ship had cut a whale in two off the Grand Banks.

The whale was friendly, and frisked about the liner for five minutes after its appearance. Unhappily it dived under the bow and was bisected neatly.

That sounds reasonable enough, but the veracious seamen went on to say that a school of 20 whales then rose up out of the great deep and swam around the vessel, "casting dirty looks over their shoulders." How does a whale cast a dirty look? And who ever saw a whale with shoulders?

If it were not for the high standard of truth that marks the sailor of every nation, some of us skeptics might be doubtful of this particular yarn.

But maybe so. And anyway, you can't disprove it.

Now that Henry Ford has established a flivver academy in Italy you can expect some quick turnovers in industry by Arabian acrobats.

Vesuvius will be a nice place to heat rivets. And where Horatio dropped his bridgework you can expect to find a new assembling plant for upper and lower gears.

"Bugs" Baer

And where Caesar crossed the Rubicon will be launched another modern laundry for old togas and the cultivation of laurel wreaths in small but popular sizes.

The dungeons of the Doges will be modernized with foredoors and a rumble seat placed on the triumphal chariot of Nero, who will do no more fiddling on Mr. Ford's time.

The fish of the Grand Canal are in for plenty of astonishment when a gondola chugs by with its fenders flapping like nervous elephant ears. Even now the traffic cops of Venice are learning to blow whistles under water and to swim with one hand while waving with the other.

One-way traffic started on the Bridge of Sighs. So that's all right. But the elevator boy in the Leaning Tower of Pisa had better straighten out that shaft or lose his job.

We can see the Chamber of Commerce claiming that the Campanile is the tallest one-story office building in the world. Italy abounds in history, but Mr. Ford will fix that.

All that Mussolini has to do is to furnish the parking space and Mr. Ford will clog it. He will four-track the Appian Way and use Captoline Hill as a test climb.

That's Mr. Henry's way of circumventing the high tariff on American cars. You may object to your neighbor's hens scratching up your garden. But you don't object when it lays its eggs there.

That egg is yours by right of eminent domain or some other legal subterfuge. The standard of wages will climb in Italy and once more the northern blonde barbarians will cross the Alps to share the commercial figs and industrial grapes of the Tuscany Valley.

Henry is a fairy godmother who waves a hand with a 12-pound sledge on the end of it. He puts the boys to work. And if that is the noise that Signore Mussolini wants then Henry is the boy at the trap drums.

We predict that Benito and Henrito will get along as beautifully as a demi-tasse and a lump of sugar and that the flivverino will make merry in the land of the effervescent banjo and that Italy will take on a new lease of life when Henry starts pulling up the weeds that have been choking the garden of the gods.

Henry may make the same mistake we made in Naples. Don't pull in your neck when 10,000 Italians straight-arm you. It's the Fascist salute.

THE SYMMETRY OF TIME

By Archibald Henderson

The work of Prof. Gilbert N. Lewis, of the University of California, on the symmetry of time in physics, has recently been crowned with the gold medal of the Society of Arts and Sciences. It is a revolutionary attack on our conventional modes of thinking, cognate to that of Einstein and Minkowski in relativity.

We are accustomed to accept the principle of unindirectional causality, in which cause inevitably precedes effect. Already, in special relativity, in the case of light rays, Einstein has shown that this is not inevitably true. As to whether this principle of unindirectional causality holds depends upon the frame of reference employed.

Lewis assumes that the present phenomena of a system are determined no more by the past states of the system than by its future states. This assumption accounts for the known phenomena of light. If wave mechanics be soundly based, then this new theory may account for the emission of every kind of material particle.

Newton introduced into physics the familiar, indeed well nigh universal, idea of the flow of time. To what do we owe this idea? We owe it to the phenomena of consciousness and memory. In certain branches of physics, two-way time or symmetrical time suffices; but when we make the transition to psychology, we must switch from two-way to one-way time.

But suppose two-way time sufficed for all branches of physics and chemistry? That would be revolutionary indeed.

All we need to do is to turn to the mechanics of conservative systems, and we will find that two-way time suffices. The equations hold whichever sign we attach to the time element. The chance of error, says Lewis, is the same in calculating an eclipse of a thousand years ago or of a thousand years hence.

In thermo-dynamics, Lewis places himself upon the ideas of Gibbs and Boltzmann. He believes that, for the universe, both directions of time are indistinguishable, as in space there is no up or down.

The quantum theory has stepped in to confirm the ideas of Gibbs and Boltzmann. The quantum theory assigns to an isolated system not an infinite continuum of states, but a finite number of discrete states.

Thus every particular state exactly recurs within finite time. The process is reversible. Time then is two-way time, in quantum mechanics.

Suppose, as Einstein suggests, that the universe is finite. It follows, from the laws of statistics and thermodynamics, that the present precise state of the universe has occurred in the past and will recur in the future, and in each case within finite time.

In a state of equilibrium, Lewis conclusively proves that there is no essential difference between backward and forward direction in time.

We must reorganize our ideas, in order to accustom ourselves to the notion of symmetry of time. It is easy to think of the present as pushed into existence by the past. It is difficult to think of the present as pulled into existence by the future!

Worst Story I Have Heard Today

By WILL ROGERS.

There was a guy in New York that got married and he did it kinda on the spur of the moment, without telling his folks much about it.

When he told his mother, "I married Elvira!" his mother says: "She ain't an actress, is she? Because, I won't have you married to an actress."

"No, she ain't."

"Are you sure? You run around with stage people so much I'm scared. Sure she ain't an actress?"

"Say, Mom," he says, "if you want to be real sure, come with me to the theater and see her act in Forty Murders, the great mystery play, tonight. Then you'll know she ain't an actress. But she thinks she is, though."

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

Impulsive people are usually unpopular and they never can understand why.

There's Bill, for example. Fine man, Bill. When you come into town, a stranger, his is the first hand extended to you. And it's a strong, warm, generous hand. There's nothing it won't do for you. Want to find a nice house? Like a car for a spin in the country? Need a list of the best stores? Bill's right on the spot to help you out. You haven't known him an hour before you feel like old friends. And you're presently amazed and indignant at the odd little smile that greets you when you mention your new friend Bill. Dear Good Old Bill—he's a Prince of a Fellow! Why in heck don't they appreciate him?

In a burst of sympathy, you mention this matter to Bill and it wrings your heart to see his response. Brokenly, he tells you all he has suffered and how there's hardly a person he can count on—really count on—in spite of all he's done for folks. Why do they act that way? Search him! He hasn't an idea. But he guesses it's just human nature to be ungrateful.

But after a while it begins to dawn on you why folks smile when Bill's name is mentioned. For you've got to admit yourself that Bill is acting mighty funny. There was that deal he offered to help you on—but you haven't heard a word from him since. And that car he was going to loan you? Where's that car? Still in Bill's garage. And where's Bill? Well, to tell the truth, Bill hasn't been around for over a week. He's all taken up with that new chap, Smith—too busy greeting Smith, in his big, warm-hearted way, to bother about you any more. And so, presently, you find yourself smiling oddly when Bill's name is mentioned. Great fellow, Bill—but too impulsive. Means well, no doubt, but somehow you can't depend on him.

Recognize Bill, don't you? You've known scores of Bills—male and female Bills. Greatest people on earth—so generous they'd give you the shirts off their backs—and yet they never seem to have any lasting friends. Queer, isn't it?

No, not queer at all. For impulsive people are really dangerous people and, even though we can't analyze the cause, we soon learn to avoid them.

It's so easy to be impulsive—and so delightful. We like to make large promises, and perform spectacular acts of generosity. It makes us feel gorgeously important. We bask in the admiration and gratitude of those we help. But, unless we harness our impulses and shape them into a definite, controlled policy, we become little better than disorderly animals.

For impulse is animal. It began long before man did. Watch impulse working in a monkey's jabbering jerks—in your puppy's wagging tail or drooping ears. HUMAN SPIRITS WAG AND DROOP IN EXACTLY THE SAME WAY AND FOR EXACTLY THE SAME REASON. They are the product of emotion—of dumb, unreasoning flesh. And unless a man rules his impulses with his brain, they become as tricky and dangerous as the impulses in a brute.

That's why we can't trust the impulsive person. He sounds like a man. He looks like a man. But there may be no real manliness behind his promises. There may only be the irresponsible vanity and amiability of a monkey or a puppy. And you can't build on that.

Pity Yourself No More

Pity yourself and go
Menaced by loss and woe;
Never secure and proud,
Never free and unbowed;
Pity yourself and gain
Only new pangs of pain.

Learn that these words are true:
Life has some work for you,
Purpose and plan must be Back of all things you see:
Patiently take up your task,
Though it is not what you ask.

Take pride in the burden you bear,
Poverty, calumny, care;
All will seem right in the end
When you learn life is a friend:
Pity yourself no more
And strength will come in at your door!

THE SCIENCE OF LIFE

By H. G. WELLS
In Collaboration With
Prof. Julian Huxley and George P. Wells.

SECTION II. THE NEW INDIVIDUAL SETTLES DOWN TO DEVELOPMENT

Hitherto the embryo has been quite plastic material; fragments of it could reorganize themselves into wholes. But there now follows a stage in which the various parts of the egg have become specialized. They have been told off to play their several parts; this piece is to grow into a leg, that into a stomach, and so on. An invisible chemical determination has taken place. Each part is set in its own direction.

By ingenious experiments upon suitable creatures, biologists can remove small parts of the developing embryo and graft them on to others.

H. G. Wells

Such a piece taken from an embryo newt just before the first rudiments of the nervous system appear, and grafted on to another newt of the same age, will go on developing and will produce what it would have produced if left in its original position, quite irrespective of its new surroundings.

The piece that ought to have formed an eye will still do so, even if it finds itself in the flank or even the interior regions of another embryo.

But if the grafting is done only a few hours earlier, we get the opposite result. The group of cells which, if left in place would have turned into an eye, would in this earlier phase, when grafted into another embryo's flank, turn into ordinary epidermis.

In the first stage the early grafts obey their environment instead of overriding it; they are so much raw material, subservient to their surroundings. In the second stage they have achieved responsibilities of their own.

By a series of beautiful experiments with developing newt's eggs, Spemann has shown us what is responsible for this sudden change from versatility to specialization. It is a region of high activity over the egg's equator (on the embryo's future back).

This, for reasons we need not go into, is called the dorsal lip; and its remarkable powers becomes manifested just when the plastic period closes. If at this stage a piece of dorsal lip be transplanted into the flank of another embryo, it not only continues to develop as it would have done if left in place; but it causes the surrounding tissues of its host to grow into an orderly arrangement of nervous system, notochord, muscle-segment, and the rest; in brief, it makes its host produce a second supernumerary embryo.

And its action is not specific. The dorsal lip from one kind of newt will set off the tissues of another kind of newt, and can even activate those of a frog.

In this universality of action outside the range of its own species it resembles the hormones. On what this strange power of the dorsal lip cells depends we do not yet know.

There are parallels in other organisms. One of the most interesting concerns fir-trees and other conifers. If the "leader" or single upright shoot at the very top of a growing fir be killed or cut off, one of the circle of horizontal branches just below will grow upwards and takes its place.

The leader keeps the other branches growing horizontally; it influences the way other parts shall grow—not, however, in this case, the kind of organs they shall produce. In flatworms, however, the parallel with the newt is even closer.

If a piece cut from the hind end of a Planarian worm regenerates a new head, a gullet and a mouth and protrusible proboscis will grow where, in these curious creatures, they ought to be—i. e., in the middle of the piece; but if for any reason no head is produced, no gullet or proboscis will be formed; the new head evidently organizes the old tissues of the rest of the piece.

Like the dorsal lip, "it makes things make themselves."

In vertebrates the dorsal lip region may thus be called the organizer, for through its action the embryo first becomes truly organized.

Before this moment the developing egg behaved as a whole; from now on, until unity is again re-established by outgrowing nerve-fibers and circulating blood, it is a mosaic of parts, each working out its own destiny and fitted together like a chemical jigsaw puzzle.

In this second stage the local independence of each part is amazingly complete. Limb-buds grafted on to back or flank produce limbs; a newt embryo whose tail-bud is cut off remains for ever tailless; if the embryo be cut in half when the nervous system first becomes visible, there is no readjustment and no regeneration beyond the mere healing of the wound-surface—the front half develops into head and gill-region, the hind half into trunk and tail.

Abroad With A New Yorker

By O. O. McIntyre

PARIS.—I always say au revoir to Paris with a gulp despite that in these post-bellum days the city has taken on the qualities of a beautiful but urticaceous plant—nettled with stinging thorns. The Paris of exquisite gallantry and gushing hospitality—so far as Americans are concerned—has almost vanished.

I speak of Paris alone and not France as a nation. In the provinces the simple and obliging charm that characterize the French is unchanged. Largely, and in justice to Paris, it is our own fault. We have been suckers and are paying the price and reaping the whirlwind the sucker sows wherever he goes.

The quality of prices, aimed almost solely at Americans, for the British will not stand the gaff, in the big dressmaking establishments as well as almost every other shop in the city, offers the most impertinent hi-jacking ever devised. Coupled with this is the thieving concierge system in American patronized hotels.

We who are visiting firemen are not so dull we are not perfectly conscious France has its majority who assay high integrity and culture. But most of us have reached a point where we would like to meet some of them instead of the rapacious rascals that tradesmen and hotel keepers fling in our teeth.

Multiply this personal incident of the morning by a full score daily and you have a fair idea. A suit of clothes was to be delivered to my hotel room. At 20 minute intervals three door-pounding ruffians—one with vest, another with coat and still another with pantaloons—upset the household, merely to get three tips instead of one.

If this trifling incident were not a part of the studied organized petty banditry it would not be mentioned here. But it is. No Frenchman would suffer it, and the most hopeful sign that Americans are not going to suffer it much longer is that Paris shops have not been so idle or hotels so desolate in many years.

Paris, of all the continental cities, is almost wholly dependent upon tourists for its financial well being. France as a whole can get along without us, but Paris cannot. A second-rate hotel in Paris now has a tariff as high as a first-class hotel in New York, without half the appointments or conveniences. And so it goes.

In the days of the tempestuous Bennett, the Paris Herald was wont to tweak the French for any slight toward American visitors. But today it seems to me to have become a toadying organ of the Franco-phile, a ballyhoo for the tea-drinking ambassadorial set and a handbill for the decadent expatriates who disport at the Sunday night dinner dances at the Ritz.

* * *

The Parisian blood fares fourth on the leafy boulevards with a new sartorial conceit these days. His shirt, collar, handkerchief and bow tie are of the same material. His clothing material is of vertical striped patterns and his lapel flower is a huge red or white rose. The hat is pulled well down on the head but not at an angle. His shoes are very pointed patent leather with cloth uppers.

It is quite childish, I suppose, to leave Paris in a pout, for of all cities over here I love and admire it most. Yet it seems to me something should be done to save it from itself. I am fully determined that I am never coming to Paris again—that is to say, not again this summer.

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

When people praise you there is need to use your brains.

Many persons have been ruined by commendation.

Friends are often responsible for failure on the part of those who at one time had good prospects.

If a compliment does not make you desirous of still greater accomplishment it is a detriment to you.

Putting this logic into use, it is easy for you to be convinced as to whether you are destined to advance or stand still, which means going backward.

Any worthy accomplishment should make it easier for you to do something still better.

In gaining what you have procured you have taken the foundation steps to greater success.

Through co-ordination of brain and body plus talent you may have attained an applauded success.

The training and control necessary to that success should help you to other steps forward if you do not decide to ride with the favorable tide of one worthy fulfillment.

Don't permit the applause of friends to make you unstable in ambition and effort.
